was entered into about the sale of said watch and deponent allowed said Arnengel to look at the watch and afterwards took it from the hands of said Arnengel. That deponent and said Rivier and said Arnengel walked in company with each other until they reached the front of premises No. 181 Corny, in said city, said Arnengel said that his uncle, uncle kept a pawn-brokers shop in said 181 Corny and that his uncle would give deponent fifteen dollars for the said watch, whereupon said Arnengel took the said watch out of deponents hand and ran into the said premises No. 181 Corny.

That deponent and his friend Rivier immediately pursued the said Arnengel but lost sight him and did not see him again until the morning of the 14th day of August, at the Castle Garden, and that when deponent asked him for the said watch he promised to give it to deponent but up to this time he has failed to do so.
