TESTIMONY.

Ellen White, being sworn, says I reside at 68 James St. On Thursday, June 24th 1880 at about 5.30 P.M. I was sitting on the stairway on the top floor of my residence when I heard my father who was coming upstairs and the young man, Patrick Dolan who was going down, engaged in an angry altercation. My father was not a quarrelsome man when intoxicated. I think father had been drinking a little on that day. I do not know what Dolan was under the influence of liquor. When I heard this I called to mother who went down stairs, I followed. On reaching the hall of the 2nd story I saw Dolan with a pistol in his hand which he held close to father's head on the left side and snapped it. It made but little noise and I was afterwards told by a police man that it was only a cap that he snapped. When he snapped the pistol Dolan said to my father "I'll shoot you". Afterwards he hit father with the muzzle of the pistol above the left eye and afterwards under the eye. I then below knocked father down against the stairway and when in that position Dolan kicked father in the left side. He then hit my mother with his fist and kicked her in the stomach until she fell and then he put the pistol into my face saying "I shoot you". I then fainted and next found

Ellen Brown, being sworn, says I am the widow of deceased and resided at 60 James St.
 On the morning in question I was called by my daughter as stated by her. I ran down stairs and seeing Dolan have a pistol I called to him not to shoot my husband. ^{Dolan} He kicked me in the stomach for an answer and knocked me down. My husband's face was bleeding then.
 When I got up again Mrs. Dolan was down and pitched into me and took my dress and hurled me down a pile of stairs. The son, Patrick Dolan, then called out to his mother: Can't you do any thing? whereupon she went upstairs and came down with the hatchet. Mrs. Dolan then struck my husband on the head with the hatchet. During this melee I was again struck, this time on my forehead. Blood rushed from this wound. I do not know whether it was a blow from a hatchet or from the pistol. Neighbors then took me down and washed me, after which I went for a policeman. Saw my husband at the (New York) Hospital. Was present there when Mrs.
 Dolan was identified by my husband at the hospital. My husband died at 1210 St. Mark on July 5th 1880. I tried to catch Dolan by the hair but could not get hold of it as he did not seem to have much. Mrs. Dolan drinks so

My husband and Dolan had both of punch at that when Mrs. Dolan used the hatchet.

TESTIMONY.

Mr. S. Raper M.D. being sworn says: I have made an Autopsy on the body of Edward Brown, at the New York Hospital on the 5th day of July 1880. Externally I found a discoloration below left eye and an abrasion of skin 2 inches above left eyebrow. An old cicatrix on the inner aspect of the lower third of right leg marks the seat of former ulceration. On the scalp in the right occipito-parietal region is found a wound $\frac{3}{4}$ of an inch long, situated about 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ inch above occipital protuberance and $\frac{1}{2}$ inch from Median Line. It extends through Pericranium splitting out and slightly depressing inner table of cranium at the upper posterior angle of right parietal bone. The Dura Mater was found very adherent to the skull. After its removal purulent meningitis of right hemisphere was disclosed. Old pleuritic adhesions, mostly on left side, and signs of old phthisis in both lungs were found. Heart was flabby and large with normal valves except mitral where some vegetations were discovered. Aorta slightly atheromatous. Kidneys and liver were fatty. Spleen, normal. Death in my opinion was caused by purulent meningitis, the result of a depressed fracture at upper posterior angle of right parietal bone, brought on by violence.

Homicide of Edward Brown.

Assault, June 24, 1880.

Death, July 5th.

Officer Thomas Tierney 4th Precinct.

On the 24th of June, 1880, I arrested Catharine Dolan at 72 Oliver Street. This homicide occurred at 68 James St. When I arrested Catharine Dolan I told her that I arrested her for assaulting the deceased. She said she didn't do it; that her son and Brown had a quarrel and she simply threw her arms around her son's neck to try and draw him away. I took her to the station house and from there to the New York Hospital for the purpose of identification. The deceased seemed to be in a sort of stupor, and the physician gave him whiskey to revive him. Then the physician said "Is this the woman? Do you recognize anybody?" He replied, "He done it" or "She done it" — I do not know which now. I do not think the deceased could tell any one around him at the time. This was on the 3rd of July. Brown died on the 5th of July. I had no further conversation with Mrs. Dolan.

E l l e n B r o w n 68 James Street.

I am the wife of the deceased. I have known the Dolans about two years, as tenants in 68 James St. I met them only occasionally. No. 68 is on the North side of James St., betw. Madison and Oak Sts., rear building. I had a room and bedroom on the top floor (4th). There were two other rooms on this floor unoccupied. On the next floor below me resided Patrick Dolan and his mother. My family consisted of two unmarried daughters and a daughter who is a widow with three children. We never had any trouble with the Dolans. The deceased was 61 years of age, stout and strong. About half past five p.m. of June 24th, 1890, when I was about going out to the store my daughter Mrs White, who was sitting in a chair on the landing outside of our own room, cried out "Mother, my father is growling with Patsy Dolan". Then I ran down stairs to where my husband was standing on the stairs between the second and third floors. The stair-way is on the right of the house. Midway of each stairway is a landing -- and on this little landing between the second and third floors stood Dolan, and my husband was standing on the stairs two steps up from this landing. I did not hear anything said until I reached my husband, when I heard "You son of a bitch, I will dash your brains out" spoken by Patrick Dolan. Then Patrick Dolan with the butt of the pistol which he held in his hand struck my husband in the face. I told Patrick Dolan not to shoot him but to use his fist, and I attempted to catch Patrick Dolan by the hand when he gave me a kick in the breast and said he would kill me too. The kick knocked me down and I got up again, and as soon as I did so Patrick Dolan gave me a blow in the nose with his fist, causing my nose to bleed. Then he struck my husband again in the forehead with the pistol and kicked him. Then his mother came down stairs and caught me by the dress and pulled me to the next landing and tore my dress. Then Patrick Dolan said to his mother, "What are you here for, God damn you. Aint you able to do anything and he shoved her up the stairs between me and my husband. Then she ran into her room and came out with an axe and struck the deceased with it on the top of the head. My husband and the prisoner did not change their positions during this time. While Mrs. Dolan was running into her room and coming out with the axe, Patrick Dolan was kicking my husband who was standing on the second step still. When Mrs. Dolan struck my husband with the axe he said "My God, My God, I am dead!" Dolan was standing looking at his mother. I then went to catch Dolan when he struck me with the butt end of his pistol in the forehead. I left him standing there and I went down to get a policeman. When I returned with the Policeman, Dolan was standing in the yard and seeing the policeman, he started to run. The policeman arrested him. When I came back my husband was sitting on the stairs outside of our door, his head covered with blood. Then Mr. Ryan took him to a drug-store and had his head dressed. He was taken from there to the Chambers' Street Hospital to have his wounds dressed. Just a week from the time he was hurt he was sitting in a chair in the room and I noticed that his left side was entirely stiff. Then we took him to the New York Hospital on Friday evening. He died on Sunday night at ten minutes past twelve. Dolan had not been working that day, and during the day I saw Mrs. Dolan bring liquor into the house three or four times between noon and half past five. There was no sign of liquor on my husband when he came to dinner at noon. I am sober every day in the year. When the blow was struck with the hatchet I could not say that my husband and Dolan had a hold of each other. A year before this I had some trouble with Mrs. Dolan who accused me of taking two dollars from her, which was false and which was settled. My husband identified Mrs. Dolan the Saturday morning before his death. Some one brought Mrs. Dolan around and said "Do you know this woman", and he replied "I do know Mrs. Dolan". "Was it Mrs. Dolan who struck you with the axe in the head?" and he said "Yes". Then Mrs Dolan was taken away. Then I asked him "If you die now, to whom will you lay your death?" and he said "To Mrs. Dolan."

0668

0669

0670
