The People vs.

Louis Beringer, being duly sworn deposes and says. I reside at No 1520 Park Avenue. I am 16 years old. I am employed with my father in the tobacco business at 113 Maiden Lane. On July 22 1885, about 10 o'clock A.M., I was riding on the front platform of car No 179 of the Central Park North and East River R.R. Co. The car was driven by Charles Thompson and was going at an ordinary rate of speed, neither fast nor slow.
When the car reached the corner of Mungin and Delancy streets I first saw a child about nine years old, whose name I am informed is Julia Weiss. The said child was walking with her back towards the car and in the same direction that the car was going. When I first saw the child she was about three yards from the horses' head walking about a foot from the rail. She carried a pail on her head and evidently did not hear the car coming behind her. I cannot say whether the car horses had a bell attached. I think that if the driver was paying attention to his duty he would have seen the child as soon as I did, and thus have had time to stop the car. As he made no motion to stop I nudged him and said "stop". Then the child was already under the horses' feet. Thompson, the driver then pulled up the horses and put on the brake. But, the horse knuckled the child down, and before the car stopped the front wheel ran over the child. At the time the horse struck the child, the child was walking about a foot away from the track. If the horses had been kept between the rails the child would not have been struck. If the driver had been looking ahead he could not have failed to see the child.

0393

0394
