Indictment filed
Dec 25 1884

New York Feb 27th 1884

Hon Frederick Smyth, Recorder General Sessions
Dear Sir, I was one of a batch of malefactors who were taken to court last Monday afternoon to plead to the indictment. I acknowledged my guilt, for it would be a manifest exhibition of folly to do otherwise after making a complete expose of my career to the officials of the Twentieth Precinct. I requested a suspension of sentence for the customary time allowed by Law. And why, Sir, did I solicit this time? not to render apparent that I had any knowledge of criminal law, but to have an opportunity of demonstrating that I am not a criminal at heart. Six months ago, I began the eventful life that finally placed me in a prison cell. It was no surprise to me - for as certain as the omnipotent reigns over us, I surmised, felt satisfied, that it could have no other termination. I always had a loathing for the miserable business, but I was borne along by circumstances hard and inexorable, and could not do otherwise. I endeavored to find honorable and legitimate employment but all to no avail. I indited supplicatory & just letters to prominent people in this community, but I suppose they were consigned to the waste basket. I essayed to obtain ^{employment} in the house of Humboldt but they could not do anything for me, although he had in his employ, foreigners innumerable. I thus as I have before mentioned took to a career which had no fascination for me: to a course that I despised. When I was apprehended by a detective of the Twentieth Precinct, by keeping sullen and hardened, I could have made it impossible to obtain more than one charge but the reaction had set in. I divulged secrets that were locked in my own breast, what were profound mysteries I made clear as the noon day sun. I have made it possible for every one whom I had injured to recover all that they had lost. and I can safely assert that hardly any of the people that are directly concerned in my case bears me any malevolence whatever. The newspaper accounts of my case were greatly perverted and exaggerated, they admitted however that I was not a criminal of vice which is certainly true, for I am not a drinker, a user of tobacco, or was I ever seen in a dissolute house or resort, which moved Detective Price to declare that I was the most mysterious crook as he called it he had ever met with. I have not communicated with any of my friends for I would rather them to think me dead than disgraced. The physical suffering that I will endure is nothing to the anguish and humiliation that my immediate friends would suffer. therefore your Honor you can see that I have good and well founded reasons for not disclosing the predicament I am now in. I have written this note, not to evoke sympathy or pity but merely to show that I am not a criminal by inclination or at heart. Yours
