Julius A. Robinson, of Nos. 2, 4 and 6 Washington Place, in the City of New-York, makes the following statement: Preston B. Lillestone and I are the proprietors of the Commercial Hotel at the above numbers. On the 20th day of March, 1883, one Lawrence Doughty, now in the Tombs, came to our hotel, registered himself as "L. Doughty, Troy", and engaged a room at $1.50 per day. He was there about a week when I met him on Broadway, and he told me that he was looking for a large store; that he was a chemist and wanted to open a place similar to Kirk's, and do his own rectifying. I told him that he would find stores very expensive, and he said he was willing to pay $7,000 or $8,000 if he got a store large enough; he said that he had retired from business three years before and had been living in Troy; that it was so monotonous having nothing to do he didn't care whether he made anything or not; that he wanted something to occupy his mind, and didn't care if he lost three or four thousand dollars a year; that it didn't make any difference to him as he was a man of means; that he knew all the boys and politicians and wanted a place where they could come to see him. This same day that I met him on Broadway his bill was handed to him for the first time, and he told me that if he didn't succeed in finding a place by the following Thursday he would return home and would settle the bill altogether. On Thursday he told me that he had bought a distillery in Rivington street and was going to put in a new boiler and give it a general overhauling. I asked him how he came to go to Rivington street when he wanted to get on Broadway, and he said he could not get a store on Broadway suitable for his business; and he also said that he had sold this same place some six or seven years before to the man from whom he had just bought it; that this man had let it all run down and he had bought it cheap. I asked him what he paid for it and he said six thousand dollars. A few nights after this I asked him what the number of this place was and he said No. 66. When the bill got to be about fifty dollars, happening to be in that neighborhood, I thought I would drop in and see him, but I found No. 66 to be a private house; there were painters painting the front of it and I asked them if there was a distillery in the rear and they said no, that it was a private house. I then went into two or three liquor stores in the neighborhood and asked them if they knew of any distillery around there and they all said no. I also met two policemen and asked ~~the~~ them the same question and they made the same answer. I also asked the policemen if they had seen a boiler being put in any place in that street within the last week or two, and they said no.

Two nights after this I met Mr. Doughty in the office of the hotel and said to him "Helloa, Doughty! I was over your way a couple of days ago and if I had known the number I would have dropped in to see you", and he said "I wish you had. I was there all the afternoon all alone and had the blues and would have been glad to see you come in and smoke a cigar with me". I then asked him what the number was, and he said 91 Rivington street. That was the last time I saw him until the morning he was arrested. I went over to 91 Rivington street and found 89, 91 and 93 to be a large church, and there was no distillery there.

About a month after this Mrs. Eliza Terwilliger, of No. 157 Houston street, called at the hotel and asked if Mr. Doughty had a valise there; I told her yes, and asked her why she wished to know and she said she had some property in it; I asked her what the property was and she said pawn tickets. I asked her how she came to come to my hotel and she said that Doughty had told her that he had a valise there and that he owed me a bill, but didn't want her to tell me where he was, for he was afraid that I would have him arrested and sent up. From the information she gave me I found him at No. 127 Third Avenue.

the amount Doughty owes me is fifty dollars and five cents; and since he has left my hotel I have learned that he has beat the St. Stevens House in West II' street.

Lizzie Douglass

As complainant in the above case, I beg to recommend the defendant to such leniency and clemency as the Court and District Attorney may see fit to show; but I expressly assert that my reasons for so doing are not controlled by any advantage to myself. That after careful enquiry I am satisfied that this is the first offence against the law the defendant has ever committed. That she is a respectable woman and the mother of one child. That she has heretofore enjoyed the confidence of her friends and neighbours and the undesignated states and verily believes that this event will prove a most salutary lesson to her in the future to avoid a repetition of any such occurrence again.
