The People
vs. Thomas Sharrahaw } Court of General Sessions. Part I Before Judge Martine. March 18-1891

Indictment for attempt at robbery in the first degree.

Peter M. Cready, sworn and examined, testified.

Where do you live? I am stopping a year and a half in the Tremont house, right opposite James street, I number I do not know exactly. How old are you? I am sixty seven years old. What is your occupation? Machinist. Do you recollect the afternoon of the 7th of March when you met the defendant? Yes. What day of the week was it? I think it was Saturday between four and five o'clock as near as I can guess. Did you see this man the defendant there? Yes sir. Where did you see him? I met him in the street at the junction of Park Row and Chatham St. What were you doing there? Walking along, just came out of a saloon after having a bowl of coffee and I had a pocket book in my pocket, the same pocket book I have got here. I had only forty five cents in it, when he pulled the coat over and got me down. I had it in my hand when he grabbed it. You had just come out of a saloon after getting a bowl of coffee? Yes, he did not strike me, but he got me down on my knees. You saw this young man the defendant? Yes. I was walking along. What did he do? He pulled the coat over my head and got me down on the street. This coat that is on me I had on my back. He got his hands right this way (showing) and he got it over my head, he pulled it.

By the Court. Did he pull it from behind, explain to the jury? He came right behind me. I jostled him. I did not know what he meant; he got it over my head on my face; he got me on the sidewalk. This arm is pretty bad where I fell on the sidewalk. He came from behind you and caught hold of your coat? He caught me behind first. Show how he caught hold of you? He caught me this way (showing) and with the jostling the coat got over my head.

By Mr. Townsend. He took the coat by the tails, did he and put it over your head? Yes sir, behind me walking along. This is the very coat that is on me. Just before he did that did you have your pocket book? I had the pocket book in my hand coming out of the store when I met him. I never recollect seeing the young man before, never had conversation with him. Then he drew the coat over your head, what did he do to you, what more did he do? There was some men there and they halloed, "catch the thief," and he ran.

By the Court. Your coat came over your head, did you stand there looking at him, what did you do? I could do nothing, he had the coat over my head. I was standing up until he got me down on my knees, he pulled me down on my knees, I could not move. Just tell about that man, what did you see or feel him do while he had you in that position? He did not strike me. Did he do anything to you? No, he tried to get the little book from me. What did he do when he tried, did he put his hand on you? Yes. I put my pocket book in my pocket. Did he take it out? He did not. How far did he get towards your pocket, did he put his hand into your pocket? No, he made a snap for it, but he did not put his hand in, the hand did not get in my pocket. Show what he did? It was in my hand, I got my pocket book in, I had only forty five cents in it. You say that he put his hand in your pocket, did he touch your pocket? I do not know, I could not swear whether he got his hand into it or not. Did he touch the outside? Certainly he put his hand down. What stopped him from taking it? I do not know. Did you put your hand there? I shoved the pocket book down in my pocket, the same pocket, and he made a snap to get it from me. he put his hand down to my pocket.

The prisoner ran into the detectives hands.
 Frank S. Price, sworn and examined, testified
 I am an officer of the 6th precinct and arrested the defendant on March 7th in front of 9 Borey.
 I was standing on Chatham Square and I saw the defendant and the complainant. I thought they were fooling. As quick as I saw the man get off his feet he halloed "stop thief." This man the defendant ran and I ran after him;
 he crossed the Borey through Chatham Square;
 he tried to get into a saloon. I grabbed him and fetched him back. When I came back the old man stood at the door, he had a pocket book in his hand. I took the defendant to the station house; he gave his name there as Thomas Kelly. I took him to Court and he said his name was Thomas Shanahan.
 I had the complainant put in the house of detention. He identified the defendant as the man who threw him down and attempted to take his pocket book. The coat was thrown over his head and he down on his knees; the defendant was back of him. He says, "I was only fooling with him; the old man is crazy, and they often fooled with him that way. He said he was arrested for stealing a blanket up in the 19th precinct but he was turned loose. The defendant pleaded guilty to assault in the third degree.

MICHAEL DEVINE, the COMPLAINANT, testified that he lived at 33 Mott Street, and was a paver and flagger. The defendant was introduced to him, the complainant, as an honest man and a good workman, and, on the night of the 7th of March, 1891, he, the complainant, allowed the defendant to sleep in his rooms. When they retired for the night he, the complainant, bolted the door, and in the morning, when he awoke, the defendant was gone, and the bolt taken off the door. He saw one of his pockets turned inside out, and the other one cut, and missed $38, $4.60 of which was in silver. Then he, the complainant, went down to the front door of the house, and was standing there talking to a man named Ryan, and Ryan said, "Here he comes up the street, with your cane in his hand." Just then the defendant came up, and he, the complainant took his, the complainant's, cane from the defendant. and told the complainant that he was going to have him arrested. He, the complainant, went to the station house, and made a complaint, and the Sergeant sent Officer O'Connor to arrest the defendant. He, the complainant, had two rooms, and lived alone in them. When he retired he not only bolted the door, but he propped up a stick about four feet long and four inches thick with an iron plate on the side of it. One end of the stick was under the lock in the door and the other end of the stick in a crack in the floor, so that no one could open the door from the outside. The cane which he found in the defendant's hands was kept in a corner of his room, as he used it only on holidays. He did not miss the cane until he saw it in the defendant's hand. When he asked the defendant whether he had stolen the money from his pocket, the defendant said he did not know whether he had or not.

the complainant testified that the defendant was introduced to him by a Mr. Sullivan. He had never seen the defendant before. He, the complainant, had a son, but his son did not live with him. The defendant was introduced to him on that same evening. He intended to give the defendant work. Mr. Sullivan said that the defendant was out of work, and had no place to sleep, and asked him, the complainant, to give him a bed to sleep in. He, the complainant, had just finished a job in White Street,, and after he paid off his men he took the defendant to his home. It was between 7 and 8 o'clock when they got home. After he, the complainant, knocked off work that afternoon, he had a glass of whiskey at Elm and White Streets, and he did not know whether he drank anything else that evening, except a few glasses of beer---8 or 9. He was affected by it. The defendant also drank with him, but he did not seem to be affected either. He, the complainant, laid down on a little cot near the stove, keeping his trousers on. The defendant went into the bed room to sleep. He saw his money last when he went to bed. He looked at it, and carefully put it back in his pocket---in his righthand trousers pocket. He was in the habit of looking at his money before he went to bed to see what he had spent and whether the remainder was secure. He did not count it. He usually carried that amount of money in his pocket, and he was sure that he had about that amount. When he looked at his money he was sure that he had $37. and about 30 cents in change. After he, the complainant, threatened to have the defendant arrested, the defendant went into McElroy's liquore store, corner of Grand and Mott, and he was put out of the saloon. ,Then the police officer arrested him.

OFFICER NEIL W. CONNOR, testified that he belonged to the 10th Precinct, and he arrested the defendant on the 8th of March, 1891, upon the complaint of the complainant. He arrested him on the corner of Grand and Mott Streets. The complainant came to the station house and made a complaint, and he, the witness, was sent out by the Sergeant to look for the defendant and arrest him. He told the defendant the complainant had been made against him, and took him to the station house. On the way the defendant said that he did not take the money. The defendant before that had said that he had been drinking. In the station house he, the witness, searched the defendant, but found nothing upon him. He had known the defendant by sight for about a year. In the witness testified that he knew nothing

FOR THE DEFENSE,

JEREMIAH SHEEHAN, the DEFENDANT, testified that he was 27 years of age, and had lived in New York for about 11 years. He was a 'longshoreman. On the day in question he was going through Mott Street and he met Mr. Devine and two laborers going to the complainant's house. The complainant asked him if he had any work, and he, the defendant, said he had not; and he, the complainant, said, "Come into the house. I will have plenty of work for you on Monday." They went into the complainant's house, and the complainant sent a man by the name of Sullivan to a distillery in front of his house to get some whiskey, and they sat down and were drinking for a while. About 6 o'clock he, the defendant, had occasion to go down as far as Canal Street, and then he returned to the complainant's house about half-past 10, and the complainant was then lying on a cot in the kitchen. The complainant asked what time it was and he told him it was about half-past 10, and the complainant said he thought he would get up and go out to get a drink, and then he and the complainant went out about half-past 10 o'clock, and went across the street to a liquor store and had drinks there. They met one of the complainant's workmen named Sullivan, and he treated several times. Then they went across to McElroy's saloon, and they had more drinks, and then they went home, and he, the witness, laid down in the bedroom, and he, the complainant, laid down on a cot bed that was in the kitchen. At about half-past 6 o'clock in the morning he, the defendant, got up and went out for a drink, and he was coming towards the door---the door was only shut, without a lock or bolt or anything else on it---and he caught hold of the knob and pulled it open. He saw the complainant's cane and took it up intending to have the use of it for a little while. Then he went to Pat Oakley's store, and had a drink, and then he went up to Mott Street and met the complainant who accused him of taking his, the complainant's money. He, the defendant, denied it. He did not take the complainant's money, and had never stolen anything in his life.

In

he said that he left the house so early because he had been drinking the day before, and wanted a drink. He did not wake up the complainant because he knew that the complainant had been pretty full when he went to bed and he thought he would let him sleep on, and go out and get a drink. He did not see any more money in the hands of the complainant than was necessary to pay for the drinks in the course of the evening.
