Assistant District Attorney Macdona, for the People

Messrs. Heinzleman and Keller, for the Defense.

George A. Glaenzer, the complainant, testified that he was an artist decorator at 41 East Twentieth Street in the City of New York. He knew the defendant.
The defendant was formerly in his employment. He was employed by the witness from the first week in December to the first week of February, 1888. He was employed as a general workman to assist the expert enameller as an interpreter, as the expert did not speak English, and because he was a chemist or druggist by profession. The defendant was employed in the manufacture of enamels. The enamels were in lumps and were afterwards ground down into a powder. They were afterwards used for enamelling on glass by a liquid process. He, the witness, kept them in tin cans, marked according to their qualities and colors. At the time mentioned in the complaint he had perhaps fifteen or twenty cans of pulverized enamel of various colors in his place of business. On or about the 8th of February last, the date on which the defendant left his employ, he found that several samples of enamelled glass had disappeared. Then he examined the other cans and found that there was next to nothing left in them. None of the cans were stolen, but their contents were. There were about ten pounds in all of the enamel taken from his place without his permission or consent. The value of the enamel was a matter of calculation, because the ten pounds of enamel were the result of six months of experiment. The batch of enamel in question had cost him one thousand dollars to prepare.

It had no market value. It was unique. The enamel could be reproduced for from $250 to $350, because the process had been discovered in producing it. It could be produced by him at that rate, but not by anybody else. After the enamel disappeared he saw the defendant in Boston, where he had the defendant arrested. In the Police Station in Boston he, the complainant, inquired if he was aware of what he was arrested for, and he said he was not, and he, the witness, said because he was a thief. He then charged the defendant with bringing or sending the stolen enamels to Boston. Then he said he did not steal it. The he, the complainant, produced a letter which the defendant had written to a friend named Ali Teras. Then he said to the defendant, he had enough in his hands to convict him. The defendant burst into tears at once, and asked him, the complainant, to remember that he had a family, and said that he would tell everything and that it wasn't his fault and that he had been induced to steal by Longuemare, and that he would give all the evidence necessary to prove it. Then the defendant took out of his pocket several letters written to him by Longuemare while he was in his, the complainant's, employ in New York. Then the defendant asked him, the witness, if he were to be a witness in the matter whether he would be treated in a more lenient way, and he, the witness, told him that the matter was then entirely out of his hands and was in the hands of the Police and that he could not keep any promise that he made, and that all he could do was to give all the facts, and that the defendant must tell all the facts and prove his innocence if he could.

(The witness then handed to the District Attorney the letter referred to in his testimony.)

After he saw the defendant in the Police Station and had the conversation with him he went to his rooms. He got a search warrant to search the defendant's rooms. In the defendant's rooms he found a catalogue. He found none of the enamels. He found also the letters written by Longuemare addressed to him.

(The witness hands the letters to the District Attorney.)

Ali Teras that he took a truck for the defendant from 230 East Fortieth Street on or about the 8th of February, 1888, to the depot to go to Boston. When he was near the depot the defendant asked him if the x trunk was heavy, and he, the witness, said not very, and the defendant said, "It must be heavy, because there were some enamels in the trunk." The defendant did not say where he got the enamels. He said to him that if he, the witness, wanted his old job in Glaenzer's employment he could have it. Then they had a drink together and the defendant said, "If you can go to work for Mr. Glaenzer, will you steal some enamel and send it up to Boston for me ? But look out." Then the defendant gave him a ticket and told him to take so much white size and gold size. (The witness then identified the ticket or card which the defendant had given to him.) The defendant told him that his address in Boston was on the card, as well as the kinds of enamel that he should steal and send to him there. The defendant also said that he was going with Mr. Longuemare and was going to work with him, and expected to make plenty of money. At one time he said he was going to work in a drug store, and at another time with Mr. Longuemare. The defendant did not tell him where he got the enamel in the trunk. He, the witness, was a porter in the boarding house at 230 East Fortieth Street, where the defendant had lived.

POOR QUALITY ORIGINAL

Under cross-examination the witness testified that he carried the trunk from the boarding house in Fortieth Street to the station at the foot of Forty-second Street. On the following day he had a talk with Mr. Glaenzer about his conversation with the defendant, and with Mr. Carranza, the foreman for Mr. Glaenzer, who lived in the same house. He had not received any reward for his testimony, and did not expect to receive any. He had since become a porter in the employ of Mr. Glaenzer. He began to work for him about two weeks after the defendant went away.

Officer Patrick Dolan testified that he arrested the prisoner in Boston on or about the 2d of March, 1888. He asked the defendant what he had done with the property that he brought from New York--the enamel. He said he did not bring any. Finally he told him, the witness, that it was in Mr. Longuemare's house and that he and Longuemare had a shop there together. About two hours after the arrest he, the witness, took the defendant back to the house and went upstairs and searched the house, which was Mr. Longuemare's house, and found a lot of enamel and several boxes of other stuff. (The witness produces the articles in evidence.) Mr. Glaenzer identified the articles. He also found a number of papers in a place in the defendant's own room indicated by the defendant. He also found a paper containing some scroll work. Under cross-examination the witness testified that the defendant and Longuemare appeared to have a shop in the house, and they found colored powders, afterwards identified by Mr. Glaenzer, in different parts of the shop. They were lying around on a work bench. He also found some in bottles there. He did not bring the defendant to New York on a requisition. He had a search warrant to search the house. He was accompanied by two other police officers. The defendant made no objection to return to New York and returned without any requisition. He told him, the witness, that he was going into partnership with a man named Longuemare, and that was the reason why he took the enamel identified by Mr. Glaenzer as part of the stolen enamels from New York to Boston. He admitted that he got the enamels in Mr. Glaenzer's shop.

Mr. Glaenzer, being recalled, testified that he identified the enamels found in the defendant's work shop in Boston as his own. The work shop was occupied jointly by Longuemare and the defendant, and was in Buckingham Street, Boston. The defendant lived in the house next door. He, the witness, had never sold any of the enamel to anybody. Under cross-examination he testified that he had been in business as a decorator for a number of years and that he had done enamelling work since September, 1885. In order to obtain the enamels that were stolen he had to go to an expense of about fifteen hundred dollars, and therefore he fixed the value of the stolen enamels at twenty-five to thirty-five dollars per pound. The materials which he used were very reasonable and were purchased of a number of manufacturing chemists in this city. They would cost only a few dollars, but the experiments and the work that resulted in the production of the enamel cost over fifteen hundred dollars. His enamel was not an article that was in the market for sale. He used it for his own business alone. He would swear that the enamel stolen was worth at least twenty-five cents a pound, that would be the very lowest value it could possibly be fixed for in the market. But it had cost him, as he had previously testified, as nearly as he could calculate, fully thirty five dollars a pound. (No defense.)

that, within a few days of the day said motion was by consent adjourned to 1st inst (today) that this morning deponent learned that the case of Songen was on the calendar for trial and deponents slept in the box and the people prepared to proceed.

That deponent had no notice that the People proposed to move the trial of the cause until he arrived in the Court Room, and that the only reason he did come to Court was for the purpose of having a day fixed for trial.

That in both said actions a Mr. Robinson of 34 Franklin Street Greenpoint, N.Y. a Mr. Marsching of Park Place and a Mr. Sullivan of 220 E. 40 St. and defendants Landlady of 32 Buckingham St. Boston Mass. are necessary and material witnesses on behalf of defendants.

For the purpose of proving that the goods alleged to have been stolen from complainant were by them manufactured in the ordinary course of business and the material from which they were made purchased that the presence of all of such witnesses is necessary at the trial without which it would be extremely dangerous to proceed to trial here that they are not present and were not subpoenaed for the sole and only reason that no day was fixed for trial and that the case was not placed on the calendar

for trial. and that the same does not now appear there.

People vs. John Creighton }

John Creighton, being duly sworn, says: I reside at No 378 Grand street, and have been ⁱⁿ business at that place as a dentist for over thirteen years. I am the father of John Creighton the defendant. My said son is eighteen years old. He attended school from the age of seven years until he entered the employment of Mr. George D. Lemmon, who makes affidavit herein. He left said employment four years ago because of illness. He had brain fever and for twenty-one days was delirious and unconscious of his surroundings. Since said illness ^{my} said son has had two convulsions. Prior to said illness he was an exceptionally bright boy, but since he has been weak minded, and easily influenced and led by others. I have for that reason kept him with me in my office to ~~run~~ errands and assist me in various ways. He has been steadily at home during the past summer and this winter, and has never been away a single night, until the night of the 24th of February, as I remember. That night he was away all night. The following morning he was arrested in Jersey City. His statement in reference to the matter ^{to me} was that on the evening of the 24th he met a man whom he did not know, who told him he would give him a dollar to help him carry some things to Jersey City, and that as they were to start very early, the man wanted him to stay over night ~~at~~ with him at No 73 Forsyth street. He went there and while carrying the things in Jersey City, was arrested. The man who was with him there disappeared. I spent several days, accompanied by a detective, in trying to find this man, but did not succeed.

I am confident from what I know of the mental weakness of my said boy that he was not conscious of doing a criminal act in the said matter, and I ~~am~~ promise that he shall not again offend against the law in case the Court deem it proper to suspend sentence. I was this day informed by W. W. Vaughan, who resides in Astoria, La., that he will employ the said defendant.
