Wm. Ledyard

0748

St. Louis, Mo. 1848.

My dear Sir,
I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 10th inst. in relation to the character of William H. Craig, who has worked as an apprentice with me, and during that period I have had sufficient opportunity to judge as to his character.

As my observations of him are thus well founded, I can therefore truthfully certify that although he has been misled by others, he is not by nature, possessed of thieving propensities.

His good qualities are many and his faults are few. I have had sufficient confidence in him to intrust him for the last two years with

Execution of mortgages, amounting thousands of dollars, and have always found his returns to be correct.

Being a simple minded boy and unacquainted or familiar with crime, he was selected by cunning rogues, as an easy victim.

The experience of the past month in a prison cell, accused of having participated in a serious robbery of a Jew, has had an effect on him, and having his eyes thus opened to the sad reality, that without a single thought, his previous good character has been seriously stained.

Now fully understanding the situation in which he has been placed by the counsel of others of whose evil character there is now but little doubt, William although honestly admitting his guilt, that if the Court, by suspending sentence, will allow him but a single chance to redeem his sullied name, it will be the object of his lifetime and never again will he become entangled in the meshes of the law.

As his employer and a firm believer that his humble and honest prayer is sincere, I heartily endorse it, and ask in his behalf that the Court, understanding the real facts of the case, by so doing, will stay the strong arm of Justice and save a youth from everlasting disgrace, who has unfortunately fallen for the first time.

I have the honor to be,
very respectfully,

0752

Hon Judge Cowing.

Dear Sir

The youth William Corrigan, awaiting sentence - having pleaded guilty to the indictment against him - has a previous good character and although he has been so unfortunate as to have been implicated in a crime, he is not what might be termed a criminal, but in truth and in fact, simply a weak minded person that has been misled by others. I have known him since a child and therefore my conclusions are not those of a casual but a personal nature. He is the son of honest but humble parents, lifelong residents of this city, upon whose name, there has never before rested the slightest shadow of suspicion. When a boy he was sickly, but as the family was large he was anxious to add his mite towards the support of his little sisters and brothers. He went to work young and for that reason lacked the necessary school training. Three years ago he was bound apprentice stone-mason. At his trade he was an industrious youth and being trusted by his employer on many occasions he was always found to be honest.

Just at a time when his prospects were bright a dark cloud hovered over him and he was led into temptation and thus he fell. An evil-doer whose acquaintance he had made lured him into vice and then betrayed him with the view probably of escaping punishment himself. It is another of the many cases to which the downfall of numerous youths, possessing enough traits to have made their mark in the World, may be attributed. Happy homes have been wrecked and whole families ruined by a wrong step taken by a foolish lad, who if he had only stopped for an instant to think, the calamity would have been averted, but being carried off by the allurements of the wicked, was pressed onward and finally beached on the rock of destruction.

William Corrigan, was not the principal in the offence charged. He was only the tool of a designing knave, and now fully realises ~~the~~ his folly. He is yet young and should judgement be suspended in his case, there would be good grounds to think, that never again would it become the duty of the Court to call him to the bar.

Such being the facts given by one who earnestly hopes that the Court will consider the case before passing sentence I have the honor to be
