Assistant District Attorney Jerome, for the People.
John R. Heinzleman, Esq., for the Defense.

J O H N H I N C K testified that he was a grocer and carried on business at 103 First Street in the City of New York. On the night of June 8th his store was broken open. He had some goods in the window, among them were cans of peas and tomatoes and ginger. He left the store about ten o'clock on the night of June 8th. One side of the show window was broken. It was broken so that a hand could be put through when he locked the store up. About half past three on the following morning Officer Zahn woke him up. He lived in the same building. He went downstairs with the police officer and found that the tomatoes and peas and ginger were gone. There were several cans of each. They were worth about four dollars. He afterwards saw the missing goods in the Fifth Street Police Station and identified them.

O F F I C E R J A C O B Z A H N testified that he saw the defendants at the bar about three o'clock in the morning of June 8th, at the corner of First Street and First Avenue. He saw them carrying the cans and the box of ginger, and he asked them where they got the goods and they said they found them and then they dropped what they had and ran away. They had concealed a part of the stolen property in an Italian's stand in First Street. Meanwhile another officer had captured ~~xxx~~ the two defendants. They looked around for a grocery store that had been broken into and found that the complainant's store had been robbed. He, the witness, was standing about half a block from the complainant's store when he first saw the defendants together. There were three boys together, but one got away.

C H A R L E S A. W I L S O N testified for the Defense that he was seventeen going on eighteen. He lived in East 10th Street. He had never been in trouble before. He did not break into the complainant's store. He and Croley were together at two o'clock in the morning on First Avenue. He went to the theatre the evening before. Then he said he thought he would go down to see "Swipes, the newsboy" and he had a conversation with him and between one and two o'clock he started to go home and at Houston and Allen Streets he met the co-defendant. Croley had the goods with him and he, the witness, asked where he got them and he said that he found them along the street. He, the witness, told Croley that he was in great luck. He told Croley that there might not be anything in the cans, and they might be filled with mud and they might be fooled. They walked down the street and Croley said he thought he would put one can behind the Italian's stand, and then Croley and the other boy ran and he, the witness, started to run. He was carrying the ginger and dropped it when he saw the officer. He did not know that the things were stolen.

Under Cross Examination, he testified that he was a book-bonder. He had not worked at that trade for about seven months. He could not remember what he saw at the London Theatre, but he believed Sullivan and Muldoon were there. The third boy was with Croley, and he, the witness, did not know him.

tified that his father and mother were dead and he lived with his godmother. He was not in the habit of staying out late at night, but they had just moved into new rooms and he didn't have a night-key and he went to the theatre and didn't want to make a noise and he thought he would walk around all night and wait until the morning when the front door would be open. He did not steal the cans of tomatoes and peas and ginger from the complainant's store. On the corner of Stanton and Allen there is a saloon and there was a box lying out by the curbstone and there was a boy walking up on the other side of the street. He came over just as the witness got to the box and the witness put his hand into the box, which was an old soap box full of papers, and he pulled out the can of ginger and the other boy took the tomatoes and peas. He, the witness, said they might be rotten. Then the boy said that somebody might have thrown them away and they walked on and they met Wilson and he, the witness, told Wilson where they found the goods. Then Wilson and the other boy started to run and he started to run too.

Under Cross Examination, he testified that he had never been in trouble before. His godmother's husband was a shoemaker and he helped him. He worked in a shoe factory about four or five years before. He was seventeen years old. He went to the London Theatre. It was a variety show. He couldn't tell what was played.

M R S. K A T E K L E I N testified that she was the godmother of the last witness, and that she had adopted him as her son. He lived with her and worked as a shoemaker helping her husband. She had known him since he was two and a half years old and his character was good.
