 City and County of New York :

SABATO CAJAZZO, being duly sworn, says; that he resides at Number ^{31 Marion} ~~74~~ Street in the City of New York; that on the 31st day of May, 1889, one Biagio Recca now living at No. 5 Stanton Street in the City of New York, sold one half of a barber shop at No 5 Christie Street, N.Y. City to this deponent, for $196.00 containing, among other things, 3 chairs, 3 foot stools, and 1 barber pole. That on the 20th day of January, 1890 said Biagio Recca made an affidavit before a Notary Public that said store containing the said property was free and clear, which affidavit was made as an inducement for deponent to purchase the other half of said store; that on the 3rd day of March, 1890, said Biagio Recca sold the other half of said store to this deponent for $125.00. Subsequently one Adam Schwaab, a dealer in barber fixtures, claimed a lien on the said chairs, stools and barber pole, under a conditional sale from said Adam Schwaab to one Salvatore Buongiorno who was the original owner of said ~~shop~~ which sale was dated January 20th, 1889. That said Adam Schwaab notified deponent that he would remove the goods unless the balance due under the bill of sale amounting to $28.00 was paid, that said deponent paid the $28.00 on January 19th, 1891, to said Schwaab and took his receipt therefor. That the said Biagio Recca has never made good the $28.00 paid by this deponent as aforesaid, and by reason of the said Biagio Recca's false affidavit this deponent has

PEOPLE ON MY COMPLAINT, VERSUS

Drazio Recca

As complainant in the above case, I beg to recommend the defendant to such leniency and clemency as the Court and District Attorney may see fit to show; but I expressly assert that my reasons for so doing are not controlled by any advantage to myself.

The facts in this case are as follows. The complainant bought of the defendant about three years ago a half interest in a barber shop. Subsequently he bought of the defendant the other half interest in said shop, the defendant making affidavit that it was free and clear from all incumbrances as an inducement to the purchase. It was discovered later that one Schwab a furniture dealer had sold the goods in said shop to the party from whom the defendant originally bought; on the installment plan, the title remaining in the seller, and that there was a balance due of twenty eight dollars which complainant to protect his goods was obliged to pay. Defendant has since complaint made, repaid this money to complainant and claims that he supposes the property was clear at the time of sale, not knowing that it was purchased on the installment plan and that a balance was unpaid.

Subscribed & sworn to Drazio Recca

Court of General Sessions of the Peace

OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF NEW YORK.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK

AGAINST

Giuseppe Reina

The Grand Jury of the City and County of New York, by this indictment, accuse

Giuseppe Reina

of the CRIME OF Grand LARCENY in the second degree, committed as follows:

The said Giuseppe Reina, late of the City of New York, in the County of New York aforesaid, on the third day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety, at the City and County aforesaid, with force and arms, with intent to deprive and defraud one Salato Rargoff, who therefore had purchased the said Giuseppe Reina a one half interest in a certain Trades-Shop situated at number 5 Christie Street, in the said City, containing, among other things, three drains, three foot stools and one barber pole, of the proper moneys, goods, chattels and personal property hereinafter mentioned, and of the use and benefit thereof, and to appropriate the same to his own use, did then and there feloniously, fraudulently and falsely pretend and represent to the said Salato

Rargoff, to whom the said Giuseppe Reina then and there offered to sell the remaining half interest in the said shop for the price and consideration of one hundred and twenty-five dollars,

That the said Rargoff and the property therein contained, including the drains, foot stools and barber pole above described, was then free and clear of all liens and encumbrances, and that the said Giuseppe Reina was then legally entitled to convey the said remaining one half interest in the said shop to the said Salato Rargoff.

By color and by aid of which said false and fraudulent pretenses and representations, the said

did then and there feloniously and fraudulently obtain from the possession of the said

Salvatore Raigoff, the sum of one hundred and twenty five dollars in money, lawful money of the United States of America, and of the value of one hundred and twenty five dollars, of the proper moneys, goods, chattels and personal property of the said

Salvatore Raigoff —

with intent to deprive and defraud the said

Salvatore Raigoff. —

of the same, and of the use and benefit thereof, and to appropriate the same to his own use.

Whereas, in truth and in fact, the said shop and the said property contained therein as aforesaid, was not then free and clear of all liens and encumbrances but was encumbered, and the said Biagio Decca was not then legally entitled to convey the said interest therein to the said Sabato Rajazzo,

And Whereas, in truth and in fact, the pretenses and representations so made as aforesaid by the said Giorgio Recca, to the said Sabato Rajazzo, was and were then and there in all respects utterly false and untrue, as the said
Giorgio Recca,
 at the time of making the same then and there well knew;

And so the Grand Jury Aforesaid, do say that the said
Giorgio Recca,
 in the manner and form aforesaid and by the means aforesaid, the said proper moneys, goods, chattels and personal property of the said Sabato Rajazzo, then and there feloniously did STEAL, against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace and dignity of the said people.

Appearances:

Assistant District Attorney Stephen J. O'Hare,

For The People.

Mr. Abraham Levy,

For The defense.

ABRAHAM RABINOWITZ, THE COMPLAINANT, being duly sworn, testified that he was in the clothing business at 37 1/2 & 39 Bond street. He had been in business there since May, 1893. He was a depositor in the German Exchange Bank, and had been for the last three years. In the month of September, 1893, his balance at that bank was about $1,200.00. He had heard of the firm of H. Samuels & Son, but he had never had any business with that firm. He knew the defendant. The defendant used to go to his place to try to sell his tailors' trimmings. He, the complainant, did not sign the check shown to him by the District Attorney, and which appeared to be signed by "A. Rabinowitz." He did not authorize anybody to sign that check for him. The signature looked like his, but it was not.

In cross-examination the complainant testified at the time of the trial he had only one person in his employ. At the date of the check, he had two persons in his employ -- Sol. Livingston and Israel Rabinowitz, his brother. He, the complainant, could write, and was in the habit of writing out the bodies of his checks. He, the complainant, travelled on the road. He did not sign blank checks for his brother's use in the business when he went away. He signed checks to the order of certain of his creditors and left them with his brother. He left his brother cash for the incidental expenses of the business. He, the complainant, was sometimes away two weeks and sometimes a month; six weeks was the longest. His brother could write. He used black ink in his business; he never used purple ink. He did not number his checks. He was not in the habit of filling in the amount when he signed checks, but he always filled in the name of the payee. He never left his brother a blank check with the exception of the signature. He had had some trouble with forged checks before. He had accused another young man of forging his name. He did not afterwards settle with the young man. The complaint was not pressed, but that was not his business, "that was the bank, whoever done it, and I haven't got nothing to do with it." He did not know the young man's name whom he had arrested for forgery. The young man had been in his employ for about a year. He did not remember whether or not he had seen the defendant on the 13th of September. He had never given the defendant a check. He never told the defendant that he had an account in the German Exchange Bank, nor that he had a balance of $1,200. in that bank.

In re-direct examination the complainant testified that on the 13th of September, 1893, he was in Boston; he returned to New York a couple of days later. His brother had no authority to sign his name. When he, the complainant, was away on a trip, and his brother wanted an amount filled in a check, his brother used to get somebody else to fill in the amount.

In re-cross-examination the complainant testified that he kept the books of the business himself. He had formerly had a boy about fourteen years of age in his employ. The boy kept the books, according to his, the complainant's, instructions, when he, the complainant, was away on a trip. That boy was not in his employ at the time of the trial. He discharged that boy about three days before the arrest of the defendant. The boy's first name was Abe. Abe worked for him about a month or six weeks. That boy had opportunity to go to his desk, while he was away. The books of the firm were kept in a safe. The checks which he had signed were in a different part of the safe, where only he and his brother could get at them. In regard to the other forgery that had been spoken of, the prosecution had been instituted by the bank, and he was only a witness to the fact that an attempt had been made to forge his name. His brother could write a little more than his name. He, the complainant, could read English, and his brother "could read as much as he could write," which was a little bit.

ISRAEL RABINOWITZ, being duly sworn, testified, through the Official Interpreter, that he was in the clothing business, with his brother, at 39 Bond street. When his brother was out of the store, he managed the business.

The first time he had seen the check shown to him by the District Attorney was when it was in the bank; he had never seen it before that time. He could not read and write English script thoroughly; he understood something. He knew his brother's signature. He had often seen his brother sign his name. The signature on People's Exhibit A for identification was not his brother's signature; nor was it his. He, the witness, was able to write his name, and he knew the English letters when he saw them and could write something resembling them. The check had not been delivered by him to anybody. He attended to all his brother's business, in his brother's absence, except writing in the books. He was in his brother's place of business on September 13th, and he attended to all the business there that day.

In cross-examination the witness testified that he was going to school to learn to write and read English. He sometimes endeavored to read a newspaper, to increase his knowledge of English. He also practiced writing. In his brother's absence he paid the bills which his brother had left the checks for, when they became due. When checks came in, during his brother's absence, he wrote the name on the back of the checks, made out a deposit slip, and deposited them in the bank. He did not make out the bills. His brother had formerly employed a boy whose name was Abe to make out the bills, but that boy was not in his brother's employ at the time of the trial. Abe had been in his brother's employ about five or six weeks. He did not know Abe's last name. His brother did not take Abe's name and address when he engaged him. Abe had worked for Corn & Silber, and he had a recommendation from them. While his brother was away, he, the witness, was always careful to lock the safe before he went out. When his brother made out checks to his order, he put in the amount. His brother sometimes left checks with him, payable to the order of certain firms, with the amount in blank. Abe was discharged before the arrest of the defendant. He used black ink in his business. He never had any ink the color of the ink on People's Exhibit A. He had heard of the firm of H. Samuels & Son, he thought but he had never seen any one belonging to that firm, to his knowledge.

GEORGE GOELLER, being duly sworn, testified that he lived at 452 East 84th street. He was assistant cashier of the German Exchange Bank, corner of the Bowery and Bond street. On the 13th of September, 1893, he was acting, between 12 o'clock and 1 o'clock, as teller, in the absence of the regular teller. He had seen the check shown to him by the District Attorney before. He had also seen the defendant before. The check was presented to him, at the Teller's window, in the German Exchange Bank, on the day in question, by the defendant. When he asked the defendant, "How did you get possession of this check?" the defendant ran out into the street, where he was arrested. He did not lose sight of the defendant from the time that the defendant ran away from the window until he was arrested. A. Rabinowitz was a depositor in the German Exchange Bank, and on the day in question he had a balance of about $1,200. to his credit. The check was presented on the 14th of September, and that was the day on which the defendant was arrested. He had often seen the signature of A. Rabinowitz. The signature on People's Exhibit A was not the signature of A. Rabinowitz; it was a very good imitation of the signature of A. Rabinowitz.

In cross-examination the witness testified that Rabinowitz usually used black ink in his checks. There was nothing special in the check to attract his attention, but a check had been forged in A. Rabinowitz's name, about a week before, and when the check was presented to him he scrutinized it very carefully and asked the defendant where he got it. He, the witness, did not come from behind the counter. The defendant did not say anything to him, while he was in front of the desk, about anybody outside. The defendant was taken back to the bank after he was caught, and the defendant told him then that somebody outside had offered him fifty cents if he would get the check cashed. The defendant did not say to him, "I want to go out and show you the person who gave me that check."

EMANUEL L. MANHELM, being duly sworn, testified that he was in the clothing business at 5 Great Jones street in this city. He remembered having seen the defendant in his place of business a few days before the defendant was arrested. The defendant had been in his place several times. One day the defendant asked him if he needed a boy, and he told the defendant, "No." The defendant then told him that a person owed him some money, and he couldn't get it, the party was not home, and the defendant asked him, the witness, to give him a blank check, so that he could take it up to the man. He, the witness, was a depositor in The German Exchange Bank. He gave the defendant a blank check. The check in evidence was the same form as the blank check he had given the defendant.

In cross-examination the witness testified that he would not swear that the check in evidence was made out on the blank he gave the defendant. He did not remember that the defendant had mentioned the name of the party who owed him the money. He had known the defendant a couple of years, and had bought goods from him. So far as he knew, the defendant was a hard-working industrious boy. The defendant always tried very hard to sell him goods.

OFFICER JOHN J. GANNON, being duly sworn, testified that he was attached to the 15th precinct police. On the 14th of September, 1893, he was on duty in that precinct. He first saw the defendant on that day in the German Exchange Bank, in charge of some of the clerks of the bank. He arrested the defendant there. One of the clerks told him, the witness, in the presence of the defendant, that the defendant had gone in with a false check and tried to get it cashed. He asked the defendant why he did that, and the defendant told him that a man outside had asked him where the German Exchange Bank was, and he, the defendant, said, "Right here;" and the man said to the defendant, "I will give you fifty cents if you will go in and cash this check for me. On the way to the station house he met the witness Manheim. In the presence of the defendant, Manheim said he knew the defendant, and he, the witness, said, "What do you know about him?" Manheim said, "He was in my place this morning, and he borrowed two blank checks from me." The defendant said that Manheim was a God damn liar.

JACOB ROPOPORT, THE DEFENDANT, being duly sworn, testified, in his own behalf, that he was eighteen years of age. He had been in this country three and a half years. He lived with his parents at 35 Orchard street. He had been selling tailors' trimmings to business people around the city. He knew Mr. Manheim. He also knew the complainant. He had tried to sell him goods. He left his house on the morning of the 14th of September about 9 o'clock, after which he called at the stores of S. J. Golding & Son; Rozinsky & Sons; B. Leit & Co.; S. Cohen; F. Simon & Co.; Davids Bros.; and different other houses in Walker street. He then went through Church street to Canal, through Canal street to Broadway, and up Broadway to Great Jones street. He then called on Mr. Manheim. Then he went into Bond street, and called on Mondy & Rosenfeldt and Rosenline; H. E. Rosenthal; and Hyams & Brother. From there he went to the Bowery. A man went up to him on the Bowery and said, "Young fellow, could you oblige me by telling me where this bank is?" and the man opened a check and showed him the name of the German Exchange Bank, and he said to the man, "You're right where." The man said, "Young fellow, would you oblige me and change that check for me?" He said, "I can't take it; it is your check." The man said, "I will trust you with the check if you want to change it for me." He said, "What is the reason you don't go in and change the check for yourself." The man said, "I have good excuses. For one excuse, I am too young, and I am sure the bank wouldn't change it for me." The man then spoke to him in German, and he, the defendant, found out that the man was "green," and he didn't think the bank would change it for him. He said to the young fellow, "Does that check belong to you?" The fellow said, "No, that check belongs to my father who got it off this firm, and he sent me to change that check, and I am afraid to go home without changing that check, I am afraid of my father." He, the defendant, concluded that he would lose nothing by cashing the check for the fellow, and he said to him, "Will you trust me the check?" The fellow said, "Oh, certainly; I will stand by the stoop in Bond street." He, the defendant, went into the bank and presented the check to the teller. The teller spoke to some of the other clerks inside the railing, and then the teller said to him, "Young fellow, step into the office." He was frightened; it was not the first time he had cashed checks, but it was the first time he had been called into the office. He called out to the young fellow who had given him the check, "Come up." The teller's window was near the place where the fellow said he would wait. The young fellow started to run away. He saw the fellow saw the fellow running away, and he went out of the bank to try to catch the fellow; but when he was about ten steps from the bank he was caught by one of the clerks. He said to the clerk, "Let me get hold of this fellow that goes right in this bank, right in this hall." The clerk said, "I don't care for anybody; I have got you." On the way to the station house he was met by Mr. Manheim. He did not hear what Mr. Manheim said to the officer. A man of the name of Greenberg, in Walker street, owed him some money, and he went to him and asked him for the money. Greenberg's place was at 48 Walker street. Greenberg said, "Well, I am satisfied to give you a check, but I have no bank checks." He said, "If I can get you a check, will you give one?" Greenberg said, "Why, yes." He said, "Well, I know some one, I think, that will give me a check." He asked Greenberg what bank he deposited in, and Greenberg said the German Exchange Bank. The name of the firm was Greenberg & Brother. He went into Manheim's to try to sell him some goods, and before he left he asked Manheim for a blank check and told him what he wanted it for. He did not forge the check in evidence.

In cross-examination the defendant testified that he didn't know Greenberg's first name. He was eighteen years of age. He had worked for his father ever since he had been in this country. It was about half-past 10 o'clock when he spoke to Greenberg. It was after 1 o'clock when he got to Manheim's place. He was standing at an apple stand when the young fellow went up to him on the Bowery. The fellow told him he would give him fifty cents for getting the check cashed, but he, the defendant, did not want to take the fifty cents. He had a package of samples in his possession at the time of his arrest. The young fellow told him his name was Samuels. The young fellow was about sixteen or seventeen years old.

MEYER COHEN, being duly sworn, testified that he was a manufacturer of cloaks at 52 East Broadway. He knew others who knew the defendant. He always found the defendant an honest man.

ISAAC HARRIS, being duly sworn, testified that he was a dealer in tailors' trimmings at 75 Hester street. He knew the defendant and had known him about two years. He knew others who knew the defendant. He knew the defendant to be a good, honest boy; he never heard anything against his character.

ABRAHAM ROSENBLOOM, being duly sworn, testified that he was a manufacturer of clothing and caps at 484 Broome street. He knew the defendant and had known him about four years. He knew other people who knew the defendant. The defendant's general reputation for honesty was good; the defendant was a good, honest, hard-working boy.

In cross-examination the witness testified that he was not any relation to the defendant. He had formerly lived on the same block as the defendant. He knew that the defendant had been working for his father.

ISAAC MOSCHOWITZ, being duly sworn, testified that he was in the clothing business at 102 East Broadway. He knew the defendant, and he knew other people who knew him. The defendant's reputation for honesty was good.

PHILIP SACHS, being duly sworn, testified that he was in the oyster business in Second Avenue. He knew the defendant and had known him for over two years. He knew other people who knew him. The defendant's general reputation for truth and honesty was good.

MR. GOELLER, being recalled, testified that he knew the firm of H. Greenberg & Bro. That firm had an account in the German Exchange Bank.

OFFICER GANNON, being recalled, testified that he did not find any blank checks on the defendant when he searched him.
