Indicted for GRAND LARCENY in the second degree.

Indictment filed AUGUST 9TH, 1889.

APPEARANCES:

ASSISTANT DISTRICT ATTORNEY BARTOW S. WEEKS,

For THE PEOPLE.

JOHN C. COSTELLO, ESQUIRE,

For THE DEFENCE.

0291

2

EDWIN H. WOLF, THE COMPLAINANT, testified that he was manager for Rogers, Peet & Co., clothiers, at their store at Broadway and 32nd street. He remembered the 16th day of July, 1889. The defendant was in the store of Rogers, Peet & Co., at Broadway and 32nd street, on that day. John T. Martin was with the defendant. Martin was jointly indicted with the defendant. Martin had pleaded guilty. He saw the defendant and the co-defendant go into the store at about nine o'clock in the morning of July 16, 1889. They were near the shipping or packing counter, which was right next to the dressing rooms. He, the witness, was called from his office and informed that two men had been caught shop-lifting. Martin was placed up against the shipping counter by his, the witness's, associate, Mr. Rattigan. The defendant was present at the time, and near enough to hear what occurred. Mr. Rattigan informed him, the witness, that Martin had been stealing and had goods belonging to the firm on his person, and asked him, the witness, to hold Martin and look out for the defendant, Watson, until Mr. Rattigan could call an officer. He, the witness, took hold of Martin and held him against the counter, directing that the door should be locked, so that he could not escape. Watson came from the dressing room with a pair of trousers and said that he wanted to pay for them, as soon as he saw that Martin was in custody. The defendant said that he did not know Martin, and had never met him before the previous evening, and had been out drinking with him all night. These remarks were made voluntarily. A police officer was sent for and came in and took hold of Martin and took some clothing off him. Part of the clothes were on his back, and part of them around his body. There were four pairs of trousers. Two pair were on his back, and two around his body. They were packed so nicely that there appeared to be only a small perturbation. They were wrapped around the small of his back, and around his loins. Then, he, the witness, went into the dressing room and found three more pair of trousers. It was the dressing room next to the one which Martin had occupied. It was the dressing room from which the defendant came. The value of the four pair of trousers was about forty-one dollars. All of the trousers were taken from the counter. They were lying losely on the settee in the dressing room. The trousers in stock were kept on a table, near the dressing room. As soon as Martin was arrested, Watson came from the dressing room, carrying a pair of trousers in his hand.

0292

0293

In cross-examination the witness testified that the arrests were made on the ground floor, the store floor. His, the witness's, office was on the same floor. The witness did not know whether the three pair of trousers that were found in the dressing room, on the sette, had been tried on by Watson. He, the witness, could not remember whether the officer searched the defendant at the time of the arrest, but he believed that the defendant had some money in his possession. Of his own knowledge, he did not know that the defendant and Martin had any communication with each other. It was a rule of the house that not more than one pair of trousers should be allowed in a dressing room at a time. Sometimes, however, one pair would not fit, and it might be necessary to allow a second pair to be taken to the dressing room.

5

JOHN T. GILLIGAN testified that he was a salesman for Rogers, Peet & Co., and was a salesman on the 16th of July, 1833. He saw the defendant Watson in the firm's store at about nine o'clock on that morning, and waited on him. The defendant was accompanied by Martin, the co-defendant, who had pleaded guilty. He showed some goods to the defendant and Martin, and escorted them to the dressing rooms. He showed the defendant and his companion trousers.. The defendant and Martin were together during all this time. He showed Martin into the dressing room first. When he first met the defendant, the defendant said, indicating Martin, "Show this gentleman a pair of trousers." He, the witness, showed Martin a pair of trousers and suited him, and took him to the dressing room to try them on. While Martin was in the dressing room, Watson asked him, the witness, to show him a pair of trousers, taking him, the witness, to the other side of the store, the dressing room being on the North side of the store, the store facing West. While he, the witness, was showing the defendant trousers, the defendant said, "I will take a pair of those, if you can fit" me to them." Then the defendant entered the dressing room next to that which was occupied by Martin. Then Martin came out and said, "I will take this pair of trousers." With that the manager said, "You are getting kind of stout; ain't you? Your clothes don't fit you." This was said by Mr. Rattigan. Then Mr. Rattigan called Mr. Wolf, and left Martin in Wolf's charge, while he went for an officer. Then Martin backed up to the dressing room where the defendant was, and the defendant came out and said, "I will take this pair of trousers. Anything this young man, (indicating Martin), done, I don't know anything at all about. I don't know anything at all about him. I am from Boston." Then Watson said that he had been at a prize fight. He, the witness, believed that Watson said he had been to the Sullivan-Kilrain prize fight, and that he met Martin in Scott's saloon and had been drinking with him, and Martin said that he wanted to get a pair of trousers, and he came to the store with Martin, and if Martin had done anything, he, Watson, did not know anything about it, and was not responsible for anything that he had done. When he escorted the defendant and Martin to their respective dressing rooms, he gave each one of them a pair of trousers to try on. He looked into each dressing room before the man entered, according to a rule of the house, to see that there were no goods lying around. When the defendant's dressing room was searched after his arrest, three pair of trousers were found upon a settee. He, the witness, did not know how they got there. They were the property of the firm. The trousers that were found on Martin and that were found in the defendant's dressing room, were worth an average of six dollars a pair.

0295

0296

In cross-examination the witness testified that it was possible that some other salesman might have left the three pair of trousers upon the settee in Watson's dressing room, but he, the witness, was positive that he examined the room carefully before he admitted the defendant to it, because it was against the rule of the house to allow any clothing to remain in the dressing rooms. Two tables, upon which the trousers were displayed, were right in front of the dressing room, and very close to the dressing rooms, not over four feet from them.

0297

ARCHIBALD THOMPSON testified that he was a clothing salesman. On July 16, 1889 he was in the employ of Rogers, Peet & Co., at Broadway and 32nd street. Prior to that time he had been in the employ of Smith, Gray & Co., in Harlem. He saw the defendant, Watson, in the store of Rogers, Peet & Co. at about nine o'clock on the morning of July 16, 1889, and he also saw Marin the co-defendant. He had seen both of the men together in the clothing store of Smith, Gray & Co., in Harlem, about a year previous, and had waited on them there. He showed them trousers in that store. After they left, trousers were missing. He, the witness, was the person who called the attention of Mr. Rattigan to the two men, saying that he had better keep an eye on them. He, the witness, was busy at the time, in another part of the store, but he happened to see them and called Mr. Rattigan's attention to them.

OFFICER MICHEAL O'CONNELL testified that he was attached to the

9

19th police precinct, and on July 61, 1889, he arrested the defendant and his co-defendant, Martin, in Rogers, Peet & Co's. store, at Broadway and 32nd street. Martin subsequently pleaded guilty.
