Elanora Marble, being sworn, deposes as follows: On the 8th day of April, 1887, I was committed by Justice Murray upon a charge of petit larceny, under the name of Ellen Martell; the charge was that I had stolen three pairs of hose of the value of a dollar at the store of Simpson, Crawford & Simpson, in Sixth Avenue, New York City. The facts are, that I examined the socks with a view to purchasing them for my husband, Mr.
Charles C. Marble. I made some inquiries about the colors which were not satisfactorily answered and I laid them down, as I supposed, upon the counter. A clerk then came to me and asked me if I wanted the socks and picked them up from the floor at my feet. I told him that I did not and that I was not aware they were there until he picked them up. He said, "we will see about that" and insisted upon my going to the office of the firm up stairs. There they insisted upon examining a bundle which I had containing two jerseys, which I had bought at E. J. Dennis.

One was new and the other was not entirely new, but had been altered by me in the sleeve. The people at Simpson, Crawford & Simpson at first insisted that these jerseys had been taken from their stock. Mr. Crawford sent some one down to see and word was brought back that it was not so. Before Justice Murray a clerk from Bennett's was present, who identified the jerseys as coming from their stock, but who refused to swear that they had not been bought and paid for. Although urged by Judge Murray he refused to make a charge. #

The socks were never taken by me out of the possession or control of Simpson, Crawford & Simpson; they were not found in my possession, and the circumstances of their being found on the floor instead of on the counter were purely accidental. I never at any time intended to take them or keep them.

Upon my arrest I was in such agony and distress of mind that I did not communicate with my husband, ~~but~~ fearful of the shock and consequences to him. I was not represented at the examination by an advisor and only afterwards

STATEMENT BY DEFENDANT

Through the blunder of some one, intentional or otherwise, the wrong person has been innocently prosecuted.

The defendant is and has been simply a telegraph operator in the employ of the Baltimore and Ohio Telegraph Company, which Company maintains an office at the Italian Bank at which the alleged crime was committed.

His only and innocent connection with the matter was, that in the temporary absence of anybody connected with the Bank, he left his instrument and went behind the counter and received and receipted for the money in question. He never took it into his own possession and never appropriated or intended to appropriate it, but immediately upon the arrival of Mr. Guccione, one of the persons connected with the Bank, turned it over to him.

Said Guccione freely admits this fact and a copy of an affidavit by him, the original of which is in defendant's possession, is herewith produced. The defendant however always believed and still believes that said Guccione was a partner of the Durante in the affidavit mentioned.
