To whom it may concern -

I have known
Mr. Gebhardt's family for several years. They are a family than whom there are none more respectable.

Their friends and associates are many, and are among the most respected in this neighborhood.

Aside from this unfortunate incident, there is not a stain upon the character of any one of them.

Though not members of my church,
I have known them as a church
going people, and got acquainted with the family through the children who attend our Sunday School.

It seems to me, that these circumstances ought to have weight, in deciding a case of this kind. And, in as much as this is the first offence, and the young man is truly penitent, is it not wise to give him a chance to rectify this error? I am certain that he will not fall into this error again.

None except those who know the family, can realize the sorrow which this has brought to their hearts. For their sake, for the sake of the young man, and for the sake of their many friends I pray that this case may be settled without going further.

Honored Sir:

If I take the liberty to address you in a matter not pertaining to my self, it is, because I deem it my duty to do so, as it concerns the life and well being of an old and faithful patient of mine, Mrs. S. Lebard.

Mrs. Lebard has been suffering of heart disease for some time. One year ago she barely recovered from an attack of apoplexy and her present condition is critical and gives cause for much apprehension. — A grave shock may kill her and I do not believe, that the crime of her son — if such be proven — is of so serious a nature, as to demand the sacrifice of life for its vindication. I have known young Lebard for many years, and have always known him a good and honest boy, of rare kindness towards his mother and of benevolence towards the poor. And who could observe a family and its members better, than

To the Honorable Judge Cowing:-

We understand that the trial of August Gebhard for forgery is to come off tomorrow. We desire to state to your Honor, that we have known this young man's family for more than five years and know them to be sober, honest, industrious people, and while we cannot vouch for this young man in particular, we have had business dealings with his Father and Brothers for about eight years and their honesty and integrity is unquestioned. This is the first violation of the Law by any member of this family and if the prosecutors wish to make an example of this case, while we believe oftentimes it is well to do so, still knowing the training this young man has had from his youth up we feel that he would not offend the Law again. Our friendship and relations with the family leads us to thus address you, and we strongly recommend this case to your clemency.

Yours respectfully,

ALPHONSE SFERLOZZO, THE COMPLAINANT, being examined through the Official Interpreter, Mr. Cutano, testified that he lived at 105 West 26th street. He remembered the 19th of June, 1892. He knew the defendant, and the defendant had worked for him, the complainant, for two months. He saw the defendant on the 19th of June, 1892, about twenty minutes past seven in the morning. The defendant was not working for him, the complainant, at the time. When he saw the defendant, he, the complainant, was near the door of his, the complainant's, shop, cleaning his store. The defendant was going through 26th street at the time, towards Eighth avenue. The defendant said to him, the complainant, "That was arranged, that business." He, the complainant, asked the defendant what he wanted to say to him. The defendant said to him, the complainant, "I do not want to speak to you here but cross the street and come on the other sidewalk and I shall fix you." He, the complainant, went near the defendant and closed with him, the defendant. The defendant then pulled his revolver and fired four shots. He, the complainant, shouted for the police.

Three shots fired by the defendant hit him, the complainant. He, the complainant, did not go to the hospital; the police surgeon attended to him. He, the complainant, did not attack the defendant before the defendant fired at him, the complainant. He was present when the defendant was arrested, but, he, the complainant, was in a dazed condition and did not know what the defendant said at the time of his arrest.

In cross-examination the complainant testified that he was a barber. While the defendant was in his employ, he, the complainant, did not give the defendant a ten dollar bill to buy counterfeit money. He did not have any faith in the defendant while the defendant was in his, the complainant's, employ; but he took pity on the defendant and kept him in his employ. He, the complainant, paid the defendant his salary every week. His, the defendant's, salary was five dollars. He, the complainant, did not have the revolver shown to him by counsel for the Defence in his possession on the 19th of June, 1892. He, the complainant, had not followed the defendant around since the defendant left his employ.

He, the complainant, discharged the defendant from his place for courting a girl across the street from his store. After the defendant fired the shots, he, the complainant, picked up half a broom-handle. He, the complainant, did not strike the defendant with the broom handle. He had been a barber for thirty five years, and had been in business for more than nine years. He, the complainant, had lived in the same place since his arrival in this country, nine years before the trial.

In re-direct examination the complainant testified that he had seen the defendant write. He, the complainant, identified a postal-card shown to him by the District Attorney as being in the hand-writing of the defendant, and as having been received by him, the complainant.

JOHN F. McCAFFREY testified that he was a carpenter. He remembered the 19th of June, 1892. He, the witness, was walking down Seventh avenue, in the neighborhood of half-past seven o'clock in the morning, when he heard pistol shots. He turned around the corner of 26th street and he, the witnes, saw the defendant run ing down the street, and the complainant was following the defendant. When the defendant reached Seventh avenue he, the defendant, tried to turn around on the complainant, and took a pistol from his, the defendant's, pocket. The complainant had a piece of wood in his hand. He, the witness, caught the defendant, and the officer came across the street and arrested the defendant. The defendant resisted the officer and the officer hit the defendant in the face. The officer took him, the witness, to the station house and he, the witness, was kept in the station house until one o'clock in the afternoon.

In cross-examination the witness testified that when he first saw the defendant and the complainant he, the witness, was about eight feet away from them. At the time he first saw the defendant, the defendant had his hand in his inside coat pocket. It was from that pocket of the defendant that the officer took the pistol. He, the witness, heard four shots fired. The complainant was shouting at the defendant, when the witness saw him, the complainant. He, the witness, thought the complainant was shouting in French, and he, the witness, didn't understand what the complainant said. When the witness saw the complainant, the complainant did not have a club in his hand.

JOSEPH DORTINGNAC testified that he was born in Bayonne, France. He had been in America twenty months. He remember the 19th of June, 1892. He saw the defendant on that day. He, the witness, was a carpenter by trade, but at that time was working in the kitchen. He, the witness, saw the complainant cleaning his shop. He was standing outside his shop, reading a paper, and he, the witness, went in his shop to put the paper away. While in the shop, he, the witness, heard a shot and he thought it was some boys playing with a cracker. He came to the door of his, the witness's, shop and when he got to the door he saw the defendant fire three shots. When he saw the complainant, the complainant had a small stick in his hand. When he, the witness, saw the defendant firing there was some space between the complainant and the defendant. He did not see the complainant strike the defendant. When he saw the defendant and the complainant, they were on the same side of the street as the complainant's shop. He did not hear any conversation between the complainant and the defendant. He, the witness, saw the complainant pick the stick up from the street, after the defendant fired the first shot.

In cross-examination the witness testified that he had heard the testimony of the complainant, but did not understand it, because he could not understand English. He, the witness, heard one shot first, and then three more shots, fired one right after the other.

OFFICER CHARLES BAXTER testified that he was attached to the 18th police precinct. On the 19th of June, 1892, he was on post in Seventh avenue. He saw a crowd of men running through 26th street towards Seventh avenue, and he saw the witness McCaffrey catch the defendant. McCaffrey held the defendant until he, the witness, came up, and then McCaffrey delivered the defendant over to him. The defendant had his hand in his inside coat pocket, and had a pistol in his hand. He, the witness, took the pistol from the defendant. He, the witness, saw two wounds on the complainant. He found a pocket-book, containing some bills, in the right side of the complainant's vest. The bills contained in the pocket-book had bullet holes in them. He, the witness, thought the pistol was a thirty-eight calibre.

In cross-examination the witness testified that he saw the complainant with a stick in his hand. The stick appeared to him, the witness, to be a broom-handle. He thought the stick was about three-quarters of an inch thick. The defendant told him, the witness, that he had a girl, and that the picture that he, the witness, found in his pocket was a picture of the girl. The defendant told him, the witness, that the girl was his sweet-heart, and that that was what all the trouble was about. The defendant spoke to him, the witness, in English, and he understood what the defendant said to him. The defendant told him that the complainant was a counterfeiter and had been a counterfeiter in France. The defendant[^] say[^] on the way to the station house that the complainant had given him, the defendant, ten dollars to buy counterfeit money, that he had not bought the money, and that the complainant had come to him and said, "If you do not give me that money, I will kill you." The defendant made no such statement to him, the witness.

FOR THE DEFENCE, ANNUNZIATO GIOCONDO, THE DEFENDANT, being examined through the official interpreter, testified that he was twenty years of age. He knew the complainant and had been employed by the complainant for two or three months, in the complainant's barber shop. While he was in the complainant's employ, the complainant gave him ten dollars with which to buy counterfeit money. He, the defendant, did not buy the money, and left the employ of the complainant. The first time that he, the defendant, saw the complainant after he had left the complainant's employ, was on the day in question. He was passing through 26th street. The complainant came up to him, the defendant, and called him a vile name. The complainant had a revolver in his hand at the time. The complainant said to him, "Are you going to give me the tendollars or not? And, if you will not give them up now, I will kill you." He, the defendant, grabbed the revolver which the complainant had in his hand, and while endeavoring to get the revolver away from the complainant, the revolver exploded. He, the defendant, kept the revolver in his hand and ran away and the complainant picked up a stick and ran after him. While the complainant was running after him, the complainant said, "Give me back the revolver, and I will not do anything to you. " He, the defendant, said, "No, I will not give you the revolver, but I will give it to the police officer." Then he, the defendant, met the witness McCaffrey. He, the defendant, spoke to McCaffrey in Italian, and told him that the complainant wanted to kill him, the defendant. When the police officer arrived, he, the defendant, took the revolver from his pocket and handed it to the officer. He never wanted to kill the complainant. The complainant hit him, the defendant, with a stick while he, the defendant, had the revolver in his hand.

In cross-examination the defendant testified that the postal card in evidence was written by him to the complainant, in answer to several communications he had received from the complainant, stating that if he did not return the ten dollars to the complainant, the complainant would kill him. He wrote the postal card about three months after leaving the complainant's employ. He was on his way to his work when he passed the complainant's shop. The complainant spoke first, saying, "Hey, come here." The complainant showed him the revolver and said to him, "Are you going to pay me back the ten dollars." He, the defendant, said to the complainant, "Put down that revolver." He, the defendant, then caught hold of the revolver and it went off. At that time the complainant had no stick in his hand. The complainant picked up the stick after the fourth shot was fired.

In re-direct examination the defendant testified that he did not aim the pistol at the complainant.

In re-cross examination the defendant testified that the only person who was present when the struggle took place was the man who caught hold of him, the defendant,---- McCaffrey. The complainant had told him to buy the counte feit money at No. 91 Mulberry street, from a man of the name of Antonio. He, the defendant, did not go to Mulberry street, and never been in Mulberry street in his life. The complainant did not discharge him; he left the complainant's employ, because he did not want to get into trouble on account of the counterfeit money. He did not tell the officer that the complainant had discharged him, the defendant, because of any girl coming to the store; he never mentioned the girl to the officer. When he, the defendant, ran away from the complainant, he was looking for an officer.

THE COMPLAINANT, being re-called for further cross-examination, testified that he was never in prison in his life. He had never lived in Toulon. He had lived in China. He had been arrested in this country, for fighting, but had been discharged. He, the complainant, had been in prison in Europe, for several months, for fighting. He had been in Sicily, but had left there when he was fourteen years of age and gone to France. He had been in Gergente, Sicily, but had never been arrested there.

In re-direct examination the complainant testified that he had been in prison twice in Europe, on a conviction for calumny. He was once arrested in the City of New York, for selling Louisiana Lottery tickets.

THE DEFENDANT, being re-called for further cross-examination, by the Prosecution, testified that he had never been arrested before, and had never been convicted of any crime in his life.

Sir:-

On June 15th, 1892, on charges made by myself, you committed my son, Adolph to the House of Refuge. During my frequent visits to him I find that he is now a changed boy, and with the firm belief that he will do better, I respectfully ask if you will kindly use your best endeavors to have him discharged. My two elder sons, Henry, aged 23, and Max, aged 22 years, now reside with me, and they too are extremely anxious to have their brother home with us again. Mrs. Bertha Goldberg,

June 15 - 1892

The Managers of the House of Refuge take this method of informing you that... Adolph Goldberg... your son... has been received as an inmate of the House of Refuge, to remain during minority, or until discharged by the Managers, or by due process of law.

For your information, the Managers deem it proper to state that the Institution is not a place of punishment, nor a prison, but a Reform School where the inmates receive such instruction and training as are best adapted to form and perpetuate a virtuous character; to establish habits of industry, and to advance them in those branches of knowledge which are taught in the Common Schools of the State.

They are provided with a pleasant and comfortable home; are furnished with steady employment, with a view to inculcate habits of industry and to prepare them to earn their own support after their discharge; have appropriate seasons of recreation; are well fed and clothed, and, when sick are attended by the House Physician and carefully nursed; are regularly gathered into school at certain hours on five days of the week, and on the Sabbath are furnished with suitable religious and moral instruction. In order to accomplish the wise ends contemplated by the beneficent provisions of the State, the inmates must remain a sufficient time to receive such training and discipline as will serve to reform their evil habits, and to establish in them correct principles.

The Managers, therefore, are guided in their decisions as to the term during which inmates shall be retained in the House, by their conduct, and the period of confinement is determined accordingly. Applications for the discharge of inmates cannot be entertained until the Managers have satisfactory assurance of reformation, and that a proper home will be provided. Only in special cases, will applications be received by the Indenturing Committee under twelve months from the date of committal.

Parents, guardians, and other near friends of those children sent from the Cities of New York and Brooklyn, are permitted to visit them once a month, and on their first visit will receive a card designating these periods. Where friends reside at a distance from the city, they will be permitted to see their children at any time they are in the city, provided their visits are not oftener than once in a month. If unable, from residing at too great a distance, to visit their children, they will be permitted to write to them once within the prescribed period, and to receive letters in return.

In case of the serious illness of any child, the friends will at once be advised of its condition.

The House of Refuge is on Randall's Island, in the Twelfth ward of the City of New York, and the ferry at the foot of East One Hundred and Twentieth Street can be reached at all hours of the day, either by Second or Third Avenue Elevated or surface Railroads.

In behalf of the Managers,

APPEARANCES:

ASSISTANT DISTRICT ATTORNEY HENRY Mac DONA,

For THE PEOPLE.

JOHN G. HEINZELMAN, ESQUIRE,

For THE DEFENCE.

OFFICER WILLIAM REILLY testified that on the 8th of June, 1892, he was attached to the 13th police precinct; at the time of the trial, he, the witness, was connected with the 30th police precinct. He, the witness, arrested the defendant, in Stanton street, near Columbia, about eleven o'clock. He, the witness, was standing on the corner of Lewis and Stanton streets, and a young man came up and had a conversation with him, the witness. He, the witness, ran up the street and saw the defendant coming out of a pawn-shop, with a bundle under his, the defendant's, arm. He, the witness, asked the defendant where he was going, and the defendant said that he was going home. He, the witness, asked the defendant where he got the coat, and the defendant said that he bought it in Essex street. He, the witness, took the defendant to the station house. When he, the witness, was searching the defendant, Officer Rodgers came in. He, the witness, spoke in English to the defendant, and the defendant answered him, the witness, in English. Officer Rodgers said to the Captain, who was behind the desk, that he, Rodgers, had picked up the pawn-ticket, and that he, Rodgers, had seen the defendant drop the pawn-ticket in front of the station house. The witness identified the pawn-ticket shown to him by the District Attorney as the one that Officer Rodgers claimed to have seen the defendant drop. He, the witness, had turned the case over to Officer Brennan. He, the witness, went around to the complainant's factory, and the complainant's foreman came to the station house and identified the coat. He, the witness, left the coat in the station house.

In cross-examination the witness testified that he, the witness, had known previous to the arrest that a burglary had been committed in the complainant's shop, but he, the witness, did not know what kind of goods had been stolen. When he, the witness, first saw the defendant, the defendant had the coat on his arm, but had no paper around the coat. The pawn-shop from which he had seen the defendant coming was at 279 Stanton street, and was kept by a man of the name of Austes, or something like that. The complainant's factory was one block away from where he, the witness, had arrested the defendant. He, the witness, noticed that the defendant's pockets were torn. When he, the witness, searched the defendant, he, the witness, found a pawn-ticket in the defendant's pocket. He, the witness, did not take the defendant to the police court.

OFFICER JAMES RODGERS testified that he was attached to the 13th police precinct, and was attached to that precinct on the 8th of June, 1892. He, the witness, saw Officer Reilly pass him, the witness, on the 8th of June, about eleven o'clock. He, the witness, was standing right at the station house door. He, the witness, saw the defendant drop a pawn-ticket either from his, the defendant's, pocket or hand. He, the witness, picked the pawn-ticket up and took it into the station house and handed it to the Captain, who was behind the desk at the time. He, the witness, identified the pawn-ticket shown to him by the District Attorney as the one he had picked up and given to the Captain.

In cross-examination the witness testified that he, the witness, left the station house immediately and he did not know whether the Captain questioned the defendant concerning the pawn-ticket or not.

HENRY FREUND testified that he was a pawn-broker, and that his place of business was at #9 Avenue B. He, the witness, saw the defendant on June 8th, 1892. He, the witness, issued the pawn-ticket in evidence to the defendant, for an overcoat. He, the witness, advanced five dollars on the overcoat. He, the witness, delivered the coat to Officer Brennan, the same day that it was pawned. Officer Brennan was accompanied by the complainant. The coat was pawned by the defendant about ten o'clock.

In cross-examination the witness testified that he only saw one coat in the possession of the defendant, when the defendant entered his, the witness's, shop. He, the witness, asked the defendant where he lived, and the defendant told him, the witness, that he lived in Essex street. He, the witness, thought the defendant told him No. 74 or 84, but he, the witness, would not be positive about that.

OFFICER PATRICK BRENNAN testified that he was attached to the 13th

police precinct. On the 7th of June, 1892, he, the witness, was ward detective. On the 8th of June, 1892, the complainant went to the station house and reported the burglary, and he, the witness, was investigating it. On the 8th of June, he, the witness, entered the station house between eleven and twelve o'clock and found the defendant in a cell. He, the witness, asked the defendant where he got the coats, and the defendant told him, the witness, that he, the defendant, had bought the coats in Essez street, six months before that time. The Sergeant gave him, the witness, the ticket in evidence. He, the witness, called on the complainant, and in company with the complainant went to the pawn-shop of Freund Brothers, at No. 9 Avenue B. The complainant identified the coat shown to him by Mr. Freund as being his, the complainant's, property. When he, the witness, entered the station house, he, the witness, found a black beaver overcoat there. The complainant also identified the coat which was in the station house as his, the complainant's, property. He, the witness, was not present in the station house when the defendant was examined. He, the witness, asked the defendant where he lived, and the defendant told him, the witness, that he lived at 35 Essex street. He, the witness, was present in the police court when the defendant was examined there. He, the witness, heard the defendant say in the police court that he, the defendant, lived at 35 Hester street. The defendant said in the police court that he, the defendant, came from Alsace, Austria Hungary. In the station house the defendant gave his residence as 84 Essex street, to the Sergeant.

EMMANUEL DAVIS, THE COMPLAINANT, testified that he was a manufacturing tailor, and carried on business at 96 Cannon street. On the 7th of June, 1892, he, the complainant, lost ten overcoats from his place of business. The value of the ten overcoats was one hundred and fifty dollars. He, the witness, saw one of the coats in the station house, on the 8th of June, and identified it. He, the complainant, saw another of the coats in the pawn shop of Freund Brothers, on the 8th of June, 1892, at about twelve o'clock. He, the complainant, saw the two coats in the Essex Market Court the next morning. The magistrate at Essex Market Court told him, the complainant, to take the coats, as they did not belong to him, the complainant, and the complainant took them away. The complainant took the coats and sent them to the parties to whom they belonged, in Boston. The value of the two coats was about thirty dollars. The coats had only been in his, the complainant's, possession for the purpose of making.

OFFICER BRENNAN, being recalled by Mr. Heinzelman for further cross-examination, testified that he had been a ward detective for many years.

OFFICER REILLY, being recalled by Mr. MacDona, testified that the pawn-ticket that he found on the defendant was in his, the defendant's, vest pocket.

In cross-examination the witness testified that the ticket was dated June 8th, and that it was a new ticket.

FOR THE DEFENCE, CHARLES GOLDSTEIN, THE DEFENDANT, testified that he could not speak very much English. Being examined through the Official Interpreter, Doctor Dillon, the defendant testified that he lived at 35 Essex street, and had lived there about six months. He, the defendant, had two children in Lemberg, Galicia, Austria, which was his, the defendant's, native place. On the 8th of June, 1892, he, the defendant, bought two coats in Essex street, corner of Hester, from a peddler. He, the defendant, did not know the peddler's name, but could recognise him if he saw him. He, the defendant, paid ten dollars for the two coats. He, the defendant, carried the coats on his arm, but did not put any paper around them. He, the defendant, went to Freund's pawn-shop, in Avenue B, and pawned one of the coats. He, the defendant received five dollars on the coat. The defendant identified the pawn-ticket in evidence as the one that had been given to him, the defendant, by Mr. Freund. After leaving the pawn-shop, he, the defendant, went to Columbia street, to see a man who had promised to find him, the defendant, a situation, he, the defendant, being out of work at the time. He, the defendant did not see the man, because the man was out. Then he, the defendant, started to go home. When he, the defendant, was in Stanton street, about half a block away from Cannon street, he was arrested. He, the defendant, did not know the coats were stolen when he bought them. He, the defendant, intended to keep the second coat for his own use. He, the defendant, was not on the stoop of Auffser's pawn-shop in Stanton street, and if Officer Reilly testified that he, the defendant, was on the stoop, Officer Reilly was mistaken. He, the defendant, could not understand what Officer Brennan said to him, the defendant. He, the defendant, did not tell Officer Brennan that he had owned the coat six months. He, the defendant, had tried one of the coats on and it fitted him, the defendant. The peddler would not sell him, the defendant, one coat. He, the defendant, was dressed the same on the day of his arrest as he was on the day of the trial. He, the defendant, did not intentionally drop the pawn-ticket from his pocket after he was arrested. The ticket was shown to him, the defendant, by the Sergeant, and he, the defendant, said, "That's my ticket." He, the defendant had never been arrested before. He, the defendant, had been in America for five years and was a bartender.

In cross-examination the defendant testified that he had both the coats when he entered Freund's pawn-shop. The only pawn-shop that he had entered that day was Freund's. Mr. Freund had given him, the defendant, a five dollar bill, which he, the defendant, had in his vest pocket at the time of his arrest. He, the defendant, intended to redeem the coat later. The five dollar bill had been taken from him, the defendant, at the station house, but had been subsequently returned to him, the defendant. The defendant did not say in the police court that he lived at 35 Hester street; he said that he lived at 35 Essex street.

MR. FREUND, being recalled by Mr. Heinzelman, testified that there was nothing unusual in the transaction that he, the witness, had with the defendant.

IN REBUTTAL, OFFICER REILLY, being recalled, testified that when he, the witness, searched the defendant in the station house, he, the witness, found seven pennies in the defendant's pocket, but he, the witness, did not find any five dollar bill in the defendant's possession.

In cross-examination the witness testified that it was customary to return money to persons who had been arrested, when it was found in their possession.

In re-direct examination the witness testified that the seven cents had been returned to the defendant.

In re-cross examination the witness testified that he was the first person to search the defendant. He, the witness, searched all of the defendant's pockets and even searched the lining of the defendant's hat.
