Count of General Sessions. Part 3 Before Judge Fitzgerald. Sept. 20th 1892.

Indictment for grand larceny in the first degree Michael J. Duggan, sworn and examined.

By Mr. Bedford. What is your name? Michael J. Duggan.

Where do you live? No. 842 Second Avenue in this city? Yes sir. Do you remember September 11th? Yes sir. Did you meet the prisoner at the bar? Yes, about half past ten o'clock Sunday night. Where were you standing, the corner of what streets? Second avenue and Twenty eighth street. How did you come to make his acquaintance, did he come up to you or did you speak to him first? He came up to me. What did he say, if anything? He said nothing at all then. What did he do if anything?

My chain was in that pocket. He grabbed the silver chain and I caught him by the arm and said, "That is my watch that you have taken." He was too smart, and he broke away with the watch and chain and pencil, and he ran away, and he was hardly gone till the constable brought him back before me.

How far did he run before the constable caught him? I should say ten or fifteen yards. You tell the jury that the watch and chain was there two minutes before in your vest pocket? Yes sir. Is that it? (watch shown) No sir. You are sure this is the man? Yes, sir; I identified the watch and chain and pencil to that man, to the constable. What was the value of it? The watch cost four guineas. What was the chain worth? The chain and pencil I was made a present of; it was worth three or four dollars.

By the Court The value is thirty dollars? Yes sir.

By District Attorney. It was your property? My property, District Attorney. If your Honor Please, Mr. McLaughlin, who was assigned in this case, sees what the case is, and he offers me a plea of an attempt to commit the crime, which I will accept with your Honor's permission.

By the Court The property was all recovered? Yes sir.

The plea was withdrawn and the defendant pleaded guilty to attempting to commit the crime.

The Court Two years and three months State prison
