-----000-----

MAGRET OHEBANTERE, the complainant, being duly sworn, testified that she lived at 155 West 24th Street. She was sick on the 25th of August 1886. She had taken the prisoner into her home because she had no home, and the prisoner waited upon her as a nurse. On the 25th. of August, being sick, in bed she had her money, $32.80. tied up in a pocket handkerchief under her pillow. She had occasion to take some change out of the handkerchief and then the defendant put on a poultice. Soon afterwards the defendant said that she would take her husband to 28th. street, to take the pledge. Her husband was not in the room at any time upon that day. She, the defendant, then went out and she the complainant, tried to sleep for a short time and no one was in the room except her and the defendant; half an hour afterwards she woke up and she noticed that the defendant was gone, and had taken her clothes with her. She the complainant, then sent to her husband's shop for him.

-----000-----

Under cross examination, she testified that the handkerchief disappeared with the money. Her husband had dinner about noon, and after he went back to work, she had occasion to get some change from the handkerchief. It was about a quarter to one, when she missed the money.

-----000-----

Officer John S. Sullivan, being duly sworn, testified that he belonged to the 15th Precinct. He arrested the prisoner on the 25th of August in a larger beer saloon, about four o'clock in the afternoon. She was sitting in the

-----000-----

For the defence MARGRET THOMPSON, the prisoner being duly sworn, testifies that about half past seven o'clock on the morning of August 25th Mr. Williams came to the complainant's room, and she sent him for drink. He brought in a bottle of whisky; then she sent him for a pint of beer. Then Williams borrowed some money from the complainant, and went out for more beer and whisky; then the complainant said he had cramps and wanted Mr. Williams to put a poultice on her stomach and she gave him some money to get some flaxseed. He made a poultice in a sauce pan and put it on her stomach. Williams said that he was a good doctor. and her the defendant's husband said, that he was doctor Williams. She did not take the money nor any part of it. She did not think that the complainant had any money, in the house besides the 14 dollars, that her husband gave her on Saturday night, and four dollars and 75 cents that her border gave her less six dollars, that the complainant said she spent on Sunday to treat some company.

Under cross examination she testified, that her husband gave her no money on the 25th of August, and she did not tell the officer that her husband treated. She was intoxicated on the 25th of August, but she got the drink from the complainant.

She was promptly sent up on the Island.
