APPEARANCES:

ASSISTANT DISTRICT ATTORNEY HARRY W. MACDONA,

For THE PEOPLE.

JACOB BERLINGER, ESQ.,

For THE DEFENSE.

JOHN VOGEL testified that he had been steward on the Steamship Werra, and arrived at Hoboken. He came to New York about 7 o'clock in the evening, and went to see some friends on Sixth Avenue, where he drank and enjoyed himself until about 2 o'clock in the morning. Then he went to the saloon at 96 Sixth Avenue, in which Basse was barkeeper, and had a drink, and fell asleep in the water-closet, and the bartender woke him up. He had $120. in his pocket when he went in the saloon and paid for the drink, and went into the water-closet, and, at that time, he had the $120. in his trousers pocket. He also had a nickel watch, a silver chain and a silver coin attached to it, worth, altogether about $10. He found in his pocket a $20. gold piece and $3. in change. The $20. gold piece was in his hip pocket, the $3. in his trousers pocket, and the rest was gone. The rest was not in bills, but mostly in gold; $20. gold pieces and $10. gold pieces. He was not paid off, but he got the money in Genoa Italy. He got American money for Italian money. And then he embarked on the steamship Werra for New York. His watch and chain were missing. In the witness testified that he could not tell how long he had been in the water-closet; it was not very long; he thought it was about 10 minutes or a quarter of an hour. The only person he remembered seeing in the water-closet was the bartender, who woke him up. There was nobody in the water-closet when the complainant went into it.

AUGUST BASSE testified that he was a bartender, and had been employed at 8th Street and 6th Avenue, for Mr. Miller. He was tending bar for him on April 17th. He first saw the complainant about 6 o'clock. The complainant came in the saloon in company with four other men; Murphy was one of them. Two of them had beer and one had seltzer. One of the men that was with the complainant treated, and then went back into the water-closet. The complainant went into the saloon about 10 minutes to 6 o'clock. He was then alone. He had a drink, and paid for it, and went into the water-closet. After he had got back there, Murphy and three men came in the saloon and after drinking they went back into the water-closet, also. It was about 15 minutes between the time that the complainant came in the saloon and the time that the three men came in there. They all went back to the water-closet where the complainant was at that time. The only other person in the saloon then was the boot-black, Tony Smallsohn. Tony spoke to the witness, and, in consequence of that conversation, the witness went back into the water-closet, and as he tried to go in, the man pushed him out, the defendant. When the witness came to the door, someone inside said, "Who is coming?" One of the men was standing outside of the door, about five feet away from the water-closet. He said, under his breath, "He is coming?" He got passed the man who tried to push him away, and he opened the water-closet, and saw this man, Murphy, take his hand out of the complainant's vest pocket. He did not see anything in his hand. The witness caught hold of the defendant, and sent Tony out for an officer, and the officer came and arrested him, and the other three men ran away. When the three men came into the saloon, Murphy was talking to them, and they stood before the bar,, and one of the three men treated, and they toasted each other when they lifted up their glasses, and they all three went back to the water-closet together, as the witness described. In the witness testified that this was about 6 o'clock in the morning. They all came to the bar together when they came in, and the defendant drank with them. The witness never before saw the defendant. Murphy appeared to be sober on that occasion. He, the witness, was sober at that time. The witness testified that after he served the men, and received his money for the drinks, they went back into the watercloset together. That was about 15 minutes after the complainant came in. Nobody else came in the water closet after the complainant came in, except Murphy and the other men, and the boot-black already referred to. The witness did not know whether the boot-black had been in there or not. The partition enclosing the water-closet was about 5 or 6 feet from the floor, and did not extend to the ceiling of the saloon. The witness did not know the name of the man who pushed him away. It was not Murphy. Murphy, at that time, was in the water-closet. It was not a fact that the men were trying to go out, and pushed the door up against him, the where the man was asleep, with his hands in his pockets. When the witness went behind the bar and spoke to the bartender, the other three men ran out of the building, and the bartender got hold of the defendant, who tried to escape, and the witness went for a policeman, who arrested the defendant. The other three men were gone when the witness returned with the policeman. In the witness testified that the three men were in the water-closet when they started to run. He worked around that saloon about 10 months. The defendant was sober. The witness saw the complainant asleep in the water-closet, when he, the witness went in there for water to use in cleaning up in the saloon. He tried to wake the complainant, but he could not. He told the bartender that there was a man asleep in the water-closet.

THE DEFENSE

EDWARD J. MALLON testified that he was employed by Baker & Smith, at Houston Street and South 5th Avenue. He has been employed there for 12 years. He knew the defendant from working there. The defendant was employed under him, the witness, about 6 months. He, the witness, was assistant superintendent of the tin and sheet iron department. As far as he, the witness, knew, the defendant acted honestly, while employed there; but, he added, "There was nothing there to take."

C r o s s - E x a m i n a t i o n

(None.)

GEORGE MURPHY, the defendant, testified that, previous to working for Baker & Smith, he "fired on steamboats", and he went with a Mr. Weinhardt to Acapulco. He remembered when he was arrested. The night before his arrest he was at the Germania Assembly Rooms, attending a dance. He left the Germania Assembly rooms in the neighborhood of 2 or 3 o'clock. He went over to see a friend of his, named Billy Doyle, and had been drinking freely. He went to see Doyle at 9 th Street and 6th Avenue, on the corner, in the saloon there. After he left there, he testified, "I was pretty full, and went to the corner saloon, and went in there, and took sick. I am almost positive I did not take any drink in there, and I went in the closet, and was on the seat, and dont remember anything until the officer took hold of me. No-body went with me whatever". He testified that he had no friends in there; that he was never before arrested. He denied having stolen anything from the complainant. On his way to the station house he vomited, and was taking his handkerchief out of his pocket to use it in wiping his face and hands, but the officer refused to allow him to put his hands in his pocket to take out his handkerchief. In

the witness testified that he was working up to within about a week or two of his arrest; it was not, as matter of fact, nearer a month. He received $12. for his last week's wages. He depended entirely upon his wages for his support. He did not spend all his money, but saved some, and some he sent to his father. He received $12. and, with the money that he had saved, he had altogether about $27. or $28. He lived at 152 East 26th Street. He roomed there all last Winter, paying $4. between himself and his friend, who is still working for Baker & Smith. He took his meals in a restaurant, between 27th and 28th Streets. His breakfast costs him about 15 cents, and his dinner 20 cents, and his lunch consisting of soup, about 5 cents, making his expenses for meals about 40 cents a day. His laundry costs him in the neighborhood of 38 or 40 cents a week. He went to the Germania Assembly Rooms and had a dance. He did not take a girl there, but met one at that place, and treated her several times to beer and danced. Then he left the Germania Assembly Rooms, and walked across to 6th Avenue and 9th Street, and, on the way, went into several saloons and had drinks, and paid for them. He remembered coming in the saloon 96 Sixth Avenue, and he was almost positive that he drank a seltzer lemonade there; but he drank alone. Then he took sick and went into the water-closet. He was then under the influence of liquor and staggered. He staggered from the Germania Assembly Rooms to the different saloons, but still he could walk. He remembered going back from the bar into this water-closet, and he remembered sitting on the seat, he did not remember vomiting in there, but he had vomit on him when he came out. The closets were separate, so that only one person could occupy a closet at a time. He went to sleep in the water-closet. He did not know how long he remained asleep. He testified "It was dawning day when he went in there, and it was in the neighborhood of 7 o'clock when I was arrested." He was not with three men, and he could not say whether or not there were three men in there at that time, but he knew that there were some people there, at the bar drinking, but they were strangers. He remembered that he was taken to the Mercer Street Station, and arraigned before the Sergeant at the desk, who charged him with the robbery, and asked him what he had to say about it, and he said that he was innocent. He was searched and nothing found upon him, and he was then taken to the Jefferson Market. He walked over.

AUGUST BASSE being recalled, by defendant's counsel, testified that he heard Tony Smallsohn testify that four men came in together, and that the defendant went back into the water-closet alone. That testimony was not correct, but his the witness's, testimony, in this regard, was correct.

AUGUST WEISSNER testified that he is a member of the municipal police, attached to the 15th precinct. He remembered being called by the boot-black, on the morning of April 17th, to Miller's saloon, and arresting the defendant. In his, the witness's opinion, the defendant was at that time sober. In the witness testified that the defendant did not complain to him, the witness, of being sick. He said, "As God is my Judge, I am innocent of this charge," after the complaint was made against him. The witness admitted that the defendant tried to put his hand in his pocket, and that he, the witness, told him to keep his hand out of his pocket until he got to the station-house. He was searched at the station-house and 50 cents and a penknife were found upon him. He did not know the defendant, and had never before seen him. He had made inquiries regarding the defendant, since the arrest, and learned that he had worked for Baker & Smith.

C r o s s E x a m i n a t i o n
