Inquest into the death of William Ronan. Before Coroner Hanley and a Jury.

New York, July 3rd, 1890.

Assistant District Attorney Hartman represents the People

DR. PHILIP W. DONLIN, duly sworn, testified that he made a post mortem examination on the body of the deceased at No. 403 West 44th Street and found external marks of violence and after removing the scalp he found a fracture of the skull extending from the main part of the forehead about an inch and a half above the point of the nose across on the left side of the head to about an inch and a half above the left ear. An examination of the rest of the body showed all other organs in normal condition. Death was therefore due to shock from fracture of the skull resulting from intercranial hemorrhage.

EDWARD H. LAWRENCE, duly sworn, testified that he is an officer attached to the 20th Precinct; on the 28th of June about eleven o'clock he was standing at the corner of 40th Street and Ninth Avenue when a boy came up with two or three persons with him and one of them said the boy had been struck by a baker and a boy also said so. Witness asked him where he was struck and the boy said on the head. Witness then looked at the boy's head but could not see anything broken but there was some flour on the left side of his hat. Witness then asked the boy whether his head hurt him and the boy said no, that he was all right. The boy then started off and walked about half a block when some one informed the witness that the boy had sunk to the sidewalk. Witness then telegraphed for an ambulance and arrested the baker. The deceased appeared to be sober at the time.

FRED LOOHMAN, duly sworn, testified: I reside No. 228 East 110th Street. On the day in question it was about ten minutes to eleven o'clock on a Saturday night two young men were fighting in front of the store of this baker at No. 552 Ninth Avenue. After that the boys ran away and sometime after that again another young man came by, by the name of Ronan, the deceased and the baker's wife hollered out, "Here is one of the young men," and then the baker ran out of his store and struck the deceased on the side of the head with a rolling-pin and as soon as he did it he ran inside. I know the prisoner and I used to get my breakfast in there in the morning. As soon as the deceased was hit myself and another young man we picked him up and I walked as far as 40th Street and Ninth Avenue with the deceased which is about a half a block distant from where he was struck and there he fell. Right before that the baker and two or three others were fighting in front of the baker shop and the two young men ran away who were fighting with the baker and his friend; right after that the deceased passed by and was struck by the baker. The deceased had no part in the fight which occurred before that; he was not there at all. The deceased was a stranger to me.

JOHN GREENE, duly sworn, testified: I live No. 548 Ninth Avenue. On the Saturday night when this occurrence took place there were two young fellows fighting with this baker; after the fight they ran behind a wagon towards 41st Street and in about ten or fifteen minutes after I was standing there and the baker and his wife was standing at the door; the baker's wife said "There goes one of the men," and the baker went out and hit this young man as he was passing. I asked the deceased where he lived and he said 39th or 49th Street, something like that. I told the policeman at the corner about it and the policeman couldn't see anything the matter with him and asked me to take him home. Right after that he sunk down on the sidewalk and I told the officer he had better ring up an ambulance. I didn't know the deceased before that time, but I knew the prisoner before that. The deceased had no part in the fight which took place some time before that. There were no words spoken when the baker came out and struck the deceased. There was nobody stabbed in the eye during the fight which occurred before that; I was about six or seven feet away when the fight occurred.

GEORGE RILLING, duly sworn, testified: I live No. 519 West 41st Street. I did not see the fight at all; I stood in front of the baker store when two young men came along and spoke to the prisoner, but I didn't understand what they said; one of them struck the prisoner on the chest and the other one ran behind the prisoner and struck him on the back; I ran behind the man that struck the prisoner in the back and got hold of him and drew him away from the baker and this man stabbed me in the eye; I don't know with what he stabbed me; after that I went inside and washed myself in the baker's kitchen and didn't see anymore after that. I didn't see the baker strike the deceased; I was inside in the kitchen at the hydrant and washed the blood off my face. I don't know what he stabbed me with but I thought it was a knife. The same man that stabbed me also struck the prisoner, and I took hold of him and drew him away.

GOTLIEB MUTZER, duly sworn, testified: I live No. 552 Ninth Avenue. I was there on the night in question; some fellows came there and bought a sandwich from the man who keeps a stand there and then one of the fellows knocked the hat off the sandwich man's head; then Mr. Roeser, the prisoner, picked up the hat and then one of those men called him a Dutch son-of-a-bitch; he said that to Mr. Roeser, the prisoner; then the prisoner said he had better go home and then they struck him on the chest and the prisoner hit the other man, and then six or eight men more appeared there and commenced to hit the prisoner. The man who bought the sandwich hit Mr. Rilling and stabbed Mr. Rilling. I did not see the prisoner strike the deceased; I went inside after that. I didn't see anybody struck after the first assault.

VERDICT: We, the Jury, find that the deceased William Roman, came to his death on the 28th of June, 1890, by being struck on the head with a weapon in the hands of the defendant in front of premises No. 552 Ninth Avenue, thereby sustaining a fracture of the skull.

To the Hon. Charles H. Van Brunt, Chief Justice.

The petition of Ambrose H. Purdy respectfully shows:

That the defendant was indicted charged with the crime of manslaughter and placed upon trial for that crime in the Court of Oyer of Terminer in the County of New York, on the 10th day of February 1891. The jury rendered a verdict of assault in the third degree; thereupon the defendant was sentenced by the Court to be imprisoned in the Penitentiary for a term of one year and to pay a fine of $250. and to stand committed until such fine was paid, or to serve one day for each dollar of such fine. The defendant has remained in the Penitentiary ever since that time.

The term of his imprisonment has long since expired; and he is detained in the Penitentiary working out the fine, at ~~one~~² dollar a day.

The defendant has a wife and three children dependent upon for him for support. He is very poor, and unable to pay the fine. His relatives and friends have made every effort possible to raise the money to pay his fine, and have failed. They applied to me; and on an examination of the case, I became satisfied that the conviction and sentence of the defendant was contrary to law.

I sued out a writ of habeas corpus, as the time to appeal from the said judgment had expired.

On the return to the writ of habeas corpus, Judge Beach held that the legality of the conviction could not be inquired into under the writ. This leaves the defendant without any remedy as against what is undoubtedly, an unlawful conviction. The justice who imposed this sentence is dead.

In view of all the circumstances, deponent respectfully asks that the portion of the fine still due, be remitted.

Very respectfully,

Amos H. Rindley

being duly sworn doth depose and say that she resides at
No. 1846 2nd Avenue, in the City of New York and is the wife of Jacob Roeser, who is now serving a term of imprisonment on Blackwell's Island.

That her said husband had been indicted for manslaughter and tried before Hon. Judge Brady, (now deceased), at the Oyer and Terminer of this Court, and convicted by the jury for assault in the 3rd Degree; that this deponent has lately been informed that the said conviction and sentence was contrary to law and therefore void, but that the time to appeal therefrom had expired; that her said husband has been imprisoned under said sentence since February 10th 1891; that she is very poor and in destitute circumstances and has the care and support of her three children, who are very young and aged 1, 3^{and} 5 years.

That her husband was sentenced to imprisonment for one year and to pay a fine of $250.- and to stand committed at the rate of one day for each dollar until paid; that the term of imprisonment expired on the 10th day of December 1891, as according to law a deduction of two months is allowed.

0 10 1

That her husband had served 73 days over time which could be deducted from the two hundred and fifty in the fine.

That neither this deponent nor her said husband are in a condition to be able to raise the sum of $250.- or any part thereof in order to secure his discharge; that deponent and her children are in want and destitute and since her husband's imprisonment have been depen-

Deponent therefore prays to this Honorable
