The People vs. James King (Count of General Sessions. Before Judge Cowing. March 2, 1880.

Indictment for burglary in the third degree.

Edward Grumley, sworn and examined testified I am the complainant and Captain of the steamer Fanny. On the 25th of February she lay in the west side of pier No 33 in the waters of the East River next to the dock at pier 33; it is about the foot of Oliver St. I think. The Fanny is a freight boat carrying merchandise between Philadelphia and New York. Did you leave the boat any time that day? Yes sir. I went to my dinner after 12 o'clock. When you went away did you secure the engine room? Everything was locked up as far as I knew at the time. I had the key up in my room. I came back at a quarter past 12 o'clock. I heard a noise in the engine room, pounding on iron like I thought, the engine room was in the after part of the vessel on the main deck. I went down and found what the noise was. I found the window down and the prisoner was in there in the engine room; when I left the boat as far as I know that window was closed. I was on board the vessel and around a number of times in the morning and did not notice anything wrong at all. I found glass on deck where the window was broken. Was the window large enough for him to get through.

Large enough for him to put his hand through and open the spring. The window is fastened by a spring on the inside. What was the prisoner doing? He had a cold chistle and a piece of iron in his hand. Did you observe any difference from the appearance of things when you left the engine room? Yes sir, I found the mercury gauge taken down and laid on the cylinder head. As far as I know it was right when I went away. I found a piece of pipe that connects the gauge to the engine on the cylinder head and also a bulkhead board, the mercury gauge was cut or broke off. There was nobody in the engine room but the prisoner. What did he have to say? He said he was sent there, some engineer sent him to take down the engine. I told him I was "boss" there. Mr. Wm P. Clyde was the owner of the boat. Cross Examined. The steamer is registered in Philadelphia. I was in the engine room Tuesday afternoon and I locked it up about two o'clock; this happened on Wednesday, the following day. I had the keys locked up in my state room; no other person had intercourse with that engine room. I did not go into that engine room from Tuesday until I found the prisoner in it on Wednesday; the door of this engine room was not interfered with. I had to unlock the door to let him out.

0668

The day you locked the door did you leave down the ventilator? No sir. Was it open? It has been closed in the fall and has been ever since as far as I know. The prisoner had the chist in his hand and was not doing anything when I caught him. Do you know what the gauge is worth? I suppose, I cannot tell, I surmise from twenty to thirty, may be forty dollars. James King, sworn and examined in his own behalf testified. I am a fireman aboard steamships; the last steamship I worked upon was the City of Mexico, which runs between New York and Vera Cruz, Mexico. I guess that is not over a couple of months ago; it takes about a month to make the trip. How did you get down to the engine room of this steamer? The way it is when a man is looking for a situation aboard a steamship like that you have got to go around and ask engineers for a job; the first assistant engineer most generally puts on the men. I came down on this dock and a man asked me if I was looking for a situation. I am a fireman, I said; he said, I will be back in twenty minutes. I am first assistant engineer. "I never saw him after that. I got in the window; the window is a kind of sliding window. He said, "You go in there, and I will be back in 15 or 20 minutes. All you have got to do is to go to work and stand around in there; he gave me a 5/8 inch piece of iron bent over, what they call a house wrench. The man told me to go in there and stay till he came back, and he never came back; this was about 12 o'clock. I never saw that man before or since. I told the complainant that I was put to work by a man whom I thought was an engineer connected with the steamboat; the Captain opened the door to let me out; the window was down when I came there and I went in. Cross Examined. The man did not break the window while I was there; the things that the complainant mentioned were on the cylinder head when I came there. I did not notice that the bulkhead was pried away with the tool which I had. The Judge at the police Court asked me about this thing. I told him I was a fireman and machinist. I worked at it about five years. I believe I told the Judge I was put in there to work. Did you not say this to the Judge: "I was on the dock looking for a job and a man came and asked me if I would move some machinery for him, and he took me to this boat?" Yes sir I did. Did you not say, "he broke the window and told me to go in and take it out?" No sir I said he must have broke these things. The jury rendered a verdict of burglary in the third degree. He was sent to the State Prison for two years.
