en
The People vs. James Jimmerson Indictment for grand larceny in the first degree John M. Connell, sworn and examined. On the 25th of August I saw the prisoner on the Third Avenue Elevated Railroad between half past twelve and one o'clock, early in the morning, night time. At that time I had on my person a gold hunting case watch and chain which belonged to me of the value of eighty dollars. I carried it in my left hand vest pocket attached to a little button hole by a link caught in the centre. I was sitting on the right hand side of the car going up town and the prisoner came in with a number of other colored men and a colored woman. They sat on the opposite side of the car from me. There was a man who was convicted in the Harlem Court sitting with the woman. This prisoner afterwards sat up beside him and commence-ed talking to him. I had another man arrested with this man; he was convicted and got six months. His defendant came over and sat beside me I was reading the Telegram. I was sitting with my left elbow out of the window looking out with my head down at the street below

0622

I felt a tug at my chain and heard a rattle on the seat where the chain struck. I put my hand down this way and I felt my watch gone and I grabbed hold of him and he had his hand behind his back under his coat in this style and I reached my hand down and caught hold of his wrist and pulled it up. He had the watch and chain there. I took it away from him. I held him there and the other man whom he had been talking to came up to me and told me as I got my property back not to have the man arrested, and wanted to know if it was not worth something to me not to have him arrested? I said, no. I would hold that man at any rate. I held him until we got to 29th st. and officer McCusker arrested him. Cross Examined. This was between twelve and one o'clock. I had just returned from Philadelphia. I had been down to the store sending off the foreign mail. The time the robbery was committed the defendant was sitting beside me. My coat was open; it was a sack coat. I will swear my chain was fastened to the vest

0623

when I sat down in the car. I am positive of that because I felt it. I did not at any time see the defendants hand on my person at all. When I took hold of him his hand was behind his back with the watch and chain in it. James McCusker sworn. I arrested the defendant at the 129th street station on Third Ave. about one o'clock; the complainant was with him and had him in charge - the roundsman had him in charge. Cross Examined. I did not go into the car to arrest the man; the other officer who made the arrest is not here. John A. Gillegan sworn. On the 25th of Aug. I was conductor on the Third Ave. road and saw the complainant and the prisoner in the cars between 12 and one o'clock at night. I saw the defendant with a party of three men and two women board the train at Hurst St. I noticed them with sticks about three inches wide, may be an inch thick, I should judge they were part of packing cases. Mr. McCannell I believe went into the car. I noticed him having hold of this man. McCannell had lost his watch. Another man also accused this man of attempting to take his watch. The prisoner was present at the time; I should think he was three or four seats from him. The young man who was with the prisoner came to us and tried to settle the matter. That man got six months by Judge Morgan.

0624

I did not see McConnell's watch in the possession of the defendant.

James Zimmerman sworn in his own behalf testified. I remember the night of my arrest. I did not put my hand on the complainant's vest and take from his pocket his watch and chain from his person. I first saw it lying right down by the side of him; he must have been asleep; he looked like as if he had been drinking; the watch laid by the side of his coat. I was reading a newspaper and took my eyes off the newspaper and saw the chain. After I got hold of the chain from off his coat I went to raise it up. "What are you doing?" he said. I say, "Nothing." "You are trying to take my watch," he said. I said, "No, I am not." "Your watch laid on the seat. He put his watch in his pocket and said, 'I will have you arrested.'" The jury rendered a verdict of guilty.

The People vs

against

William Jones.

City and County of New York ss. Floyd T Gill being duly sworn says that he is an officer attached to the 9th Precinct, that he arrested the defendant William Jones under these circumstances; the store of the complainant Mayhew is on the corner of 11th Street and Greenwich Avenue, and has glass windows all around it, and there is a bright light in the store at night, and was on the occasion hereinafter mentioned; that on the night ^(morning) of 10th of September last deponent saw the defendant William Jones coming along Greenwich ^{Street} towards 10th Street, about 3 o'clock in the morning, and from the direction of the corner where said store is situated; deponent was then about one hundred feet from the store, and thinking that said defendant came out of them arrested him, and brought him back with him to the store; deponent found the glass and wire broke off the store door on Greenwich Avenue, and the door open; that deponent charged the defendant with having broken open the door and he denied it; and said that he was on his way home from a friend's. Defendant appeared to be intoxicated. Deponent took him to the station house where he was searched, deponent having first searched him in the street. Nothing was found upon him, and nothing had been taken from the store. Deponent says that he heard no noise or breaking before he arrested the defendant.

Deponent says that he did not see the defendant coming out of the store and did ^{not} intentionally swear that he did; but only ~~that~~ saw him coming from that direction, and it being late, and knowing defendant to be a stranger he arrested him. Deponent says that no tools or implements were found on defendant, and nothing to show or indicate that defendant had broken in the store; that he strenuously denied having broken in the place or knowing anything about it. Deponent says that he found no person in the store, and saw no one else in the neighborhood or about the store, which was well lighted. Deponent says that he tried the doors about 12.20 Am and found them secure; that he passed there again about an hour or more before he arrested defendant and noticed nothing wrong.
