N.Y. Court of General Sessions
The People
vs
Thomas Hannon }

I, John C. Begley, the complainant in this case, ask the Court to discharge the defendant for the following reasons:

That though my property was stolen, I did not see it stolen

That though the defendant shortly afterwards was found with it in his possession, his statement that he received it from another person who stole it (without his knowledge of the fact) for the purpose of procuring a purchaser may be true

That my statement in the Complaint that he admitted having stolen the watch is incorrect, he only having admitted that he had the watch, when he was informed that it had been stolen and voluntarily and promptly gave it up, whereupon he was arrested -

That my property was taken from my vest while it was hanging on the wall, I, at the time being engaged in an amateur boxing match, one of a set in an amateur boxing tournament wherein the defendant was also a participant and that in view of what I have since learned about the defendant's good character, it is probable that he did not steal it and that his possession of it was altogether innocent

That I have received no reward or inducement of any kind for making this request—

THE PEOPLE,

vs.

CARL J. HANSEN.

BEFORE JUDGE MARTINE.

Wednesday, November 1, 1893.

Indicted for Burglary, in the second degree.

MARY McCAFFREY, sworn and examined, testified:

I live at 345 Spring street, and have lived there one year, on the top floor; I occupy two rooms; on the night of the 10th of October I was living there, with my daughter. I retired about 10 o'clock; there is no entry into my rooms but a door from the hall; there is a fire escape from the building. When I retired I closed and locked the doors securely. How many windows are there in your rooms that lead to the fire escape? One; and when I retired, that window was closed; I had a kerosene lamp burning. When were you awakened? At half-past 12. What woke you up? This man breathing over my face; he was standing up, in his night-clothes. I screamed and woke my daughter up; he was leaning over me. When you awoke was there any light in the room? No. I understood you to say you left a kerosene lamp burning when you went to bed and went to sleep, and when you woke up the light was out? Yes. Did you afterwards look to see whether all the oil was burned out in the lamp? The wick was long, and there was plenty of oil; I looked at it to see. What became of the defendant? He ran through the kitchen and ran through the window that led on to the fire escape. I dressed myself, and went out of the house; I ran to my cousin's house, around the corner, and stayed there all night, until half-past 5 in the morning, and came around with the officer and had the defendant arrested. Where did you find him? In bed, in the next house. Had you ever seen him before that time? No. Are you sure that he is the man that you saw in your room? Yes. What did he say when the officer came in? He didn't say anything.

POOR QUALITY

CROSS EXAMINATION:

Were you able to see his face when you woke up? Yes. You say the light in the room had been extinguished previously? Yes; the electric light shown from the other side of the street in my window. Was the room sufficiently light to clearly see the man's face? Yes; when he was going out, he turned one side, and I saw him running; he shut the window, and he went out on the fire-escape. You say you saw his face? Yes, I saw it over me in the bed. Did you notice anything peculiar about his face? A mustache. You could see his face clearly? Yes; I felt the breathing, and I said, "Who is that?" He says, "It is me;" I screamed and woke up my daughter, and he ran from the bed-room into the kitchen and out on the fire-escape. Did you look out of the window after him? No. When you came up stairs into the next house, you found him asleep? I found him in bed. Didn't it require a great deal of shaking? His door was locked; I am positive it was, because he opened it; I saw that he came to the door and opened it. Was he standing there at the door when you entered? Yes. He was not in bed when you came into the room? No. Nobody had asked him to wake up? No. As matter of fact, didn't the policeman ask you, at that time, "Are you sure that is the man?" Yes. Didn't you say, "I am not quite sure?" Not that I remember. Your friend was with you at that time? Yes. She lived in a different block; didn't she? Yes. She was the friend with whom you spent the night afterwards? Yes. Isn't it a fact that this friend, who knew nothing at all about the case, that she had a stick with her and poked the stick at this defendant and called him a name which I shall not repeat, and said, "That is the man?" The description that I gave----

BY THE COURT: Did that thing happen that the counsel asked you? Yes. Did the woman poke a stick at him and say, "That must be the man?" Yes; there was no light in the room; she had not seen him.

BY COUNSEL: She said, "He is the man?" Yes. You became very sure after she had poked the stick in his face? I was sure, anyhow; my daughter was down stairs. Your daughter recognized him as soon as you did? Yes. As matter of fact, also, after this woman had said, "He is the man," you then became very sure in your identification; didn't you go to another room, next door, where another man slept, to see if he could not possibly be the man? Yes; the fire escape leads to both of those rooms. As matter of fact, when this man that you said you saw in your room that night went out the window, he might have gone on to the fire-escape and gone into the window of the room occupied by an entirely different person? Yes. Isn't it a matter of fact that, that this man was the man, didn't you find it necessary to go into this other man's room to see if that might not possibly be the man? The defendant was the only man of that description in the house. Didn't you do that? Yes. (By the Court:) You did that before you saw him? Yes; the fire-escape did not go into both rooms, because it is partitioned different; mine is a tenement house. (By counsel:) Would it not have been possible for a man to go out of your window that night and to have gone either into one window or another window; you didn't watch him after he went out? No. You do not know into what window he went? There was only two windows there. That fire escape leads to the two windows? Yes. It would not have been possible for a man to go from one window to the other? Yes. It was only five hours afterwards that you went into this man's rooms, and he was asleep? I couldn't tell you whether she was asleep. He came to the door? Yes. (By the Court:) When you first saw him you say he stood inside the door, and you heard the door open? Yes. You went in, and there was this defendant? Yes. (By Counsel:) Isn't it also true that you said, when identifying him, not that you remembered that he was the man, but it was some man with broad shoulders, some big man? He was the only man in the house of that description. Did you say he was a man of broad shoulders? I don't know, I might have said it; I don't know. Did you give any description to the officer or to anybody; did you say anything about his shoulders? Not as I know of. You are quite positive from his general looks he was the man? Yes.

BY THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY: The fire-escape that this man got on when he left your room led to two other windows; is that right? One window, and another window of the house where he lives. Was the room in which you found him the room which that window opened out of? No, he was in the other room, on the same floor. Was there any one in that room? Yes, another gentleman, sleeping. Did you see that man? Yes. Was that the man who was in your room? No. Were you sleeping in the front room? Yes. Is the fire escape out of the room in which you slept? No, the kitchen. So that he had to go out to the other room? Yes; I turned the light low. When you woke up, there was no light from your lamp? No. Tell me about the electric light; where is that situated? On the park. How far away from your house is that electric light? There is only two or three doors, and then there is one in Charlton street, a block away; there is one on each corner. Was there sufficient light in your room to distinguish objects in there? Yes, when he went out, he turned the shade. When you looked, was his face towards you? Yes. Look at that man, now; are you sure that is the man who was in the room; was there sufficient light for you to see him, positively, and is that the man? Yes. Did you immediately get out of bed? Yes. Had he got out of your room when you got out of bed? No, he turned out of the bed room, and went into the kitchen. Did you follow him with your eyes, so that you could see him in the kitchen? Yes. Does that electric light shine also in the kitchen? Yes; he jumped out of the window, on the fire-escape; he pulled the shade, and broke the string. You did not see his face when he was going out of the window? No, I saw his back; when the door of the defendant's room was opened, I saw him standing there; he had the same underclothes on as he had on in my room; my cousin said, "You must be the man," and I looked then, and I says, "You are the man." He commenced to laugh, but did not say anything at all.

WILLIAM H. FITZMAURICE, sworn and examined, testified:

I am an officer of the Municipal Police, attached to the Eighth Precinct, and on the morning of the 10th of October I went with Mrs. McCaffrey to the premises 347 Spring street. As I was patrolling my post through Spring street, I got to the corner of Washington and Spring streets, Mrs. McCaffrey was standing outside of Clinton Market; I was called over by her and a gentleman whom she was talking to; she asked me to go up stairs, and I went up to the premises 345 Spring street; I ascended the stairs and went to the rooms she pointed out to me. I made a mistake; I went to the room in 347. I spoke to the proprietor, Mr. Haakonsea, and then I went up three flights to the top, and examined the roof; there are domer windows come down kind of diagonally. I went to one room, and the party was not there; I went to the door and knocked and a gentleman came to the door, and Mrs. McCaffrey said she was not the party. The first door I was at two or three minutes before the party answered, but at the second door, only just a couple of seconds; some one said, "Who is there?" I says, "An officer." Mr. Haakonsea said, "Carl, get up." He said, "Wait a minute," and then he opened the door; I looked in and saw the defendant there, sitting on the edge of the bed; he was in his under-clothes. I told him to dress himself, and told him the nature of the charge; I says, "I shall have to put you under arrest, under this lady's complaint; she claims you entered her room, and tried to assault her daughter; her daughter was woke up by your hot breath over her;" he put on his clothes and he walked with me; he said they must be mistaken. With that I said to Mrs. McCaffrey, "This is a very serious charge; where is your daughter?" She says, "At Mrs. Robinson's house, my cousin." I said, "You had better go and get your daughter, and I will stay on the corner, to verify the charge." The daughter said, "This is the man." I brought the defendant to the Police Court. Did you have any talk about it with the defendant? No; his landlord told me, before I went to the Grand Jury, that the defendant was a somnambulist.

POOR QUALITY

1005

The complainant has testified that the defendant didn't say a word all the time, but that he laughed; and you say, when he was charged with being in this room, he said he did not know anything about it? He said it was a mistake; he said there must be some mistake; he said this on the way down stairs. He made that same statement the next morning, in Jefferson Market Police Court, that it was a mistake and he did not know anything about it.

LIZZIE McCaffrey, sworn and examined, testified:

You are the daughter of Mrs. McCaffrey, living at 245 Spring street? Yes. On the night of the 9th of October, or early in the morning of the 10th, did you see a man in your mother's apartments? Yes. Have you seen that man since? Only in court. When did you see him next? That morning, when he was arrested. Is this the man (pointing to the defendant) Yes. Are you sure? Yes.

CROSS EXAMINATION:

I am sure that the defendant is the man that was there on that night. Your mother woke up about half-past 12? Yes. Tell me what you saw? A man was just running out of the door. Did you see his face? As he turned, I saw his face, and then he jumped up on the table, and I saw his back. Did you see his face distinctly? Yes, his side face. Had you ever seen him before? No. You simply got a side view of his face that night, as he was running to get out of the room? Yes, as he was running. From that, do you say that this is the man that you saw that night --are you positively certain that this is the man? Yes. How old are you? Fifteen.

CARL J. HANSEN, sworn and examined, in his own behalf,
testified as follows:

I am twenty-seven years old, and was born in Norway; I am in this country seven months; I have been a sailor four months, and working on shore, as a longshoreman, three months. That was on Monday night; I went, at 6 o'clock, down to pier 25 to get my week's pay; I was not working that day, because there was only one ship in. I went home with a friend of mine, and on the way home we had a couple of glasses of beer, and I parted with him on the corner of Charlton street; it was about 8 o'clock, and I went up to Mr. Haakonsea and paid him $4.; I had my supper. There is a fellow named Klaus Olsen living in the house, and we went out together for a walk and had a few glasses of beer together. He said, "It is about time to go home;" it was about half-past 10 or close to 11 o'clock; when we came down the street, we met Mr. Haakonsea and his wife, the man who keeps the house; he says, "I think it is about time for you boys to go home;" I says, "We are just on the way home; won't you have a glass of beer before we go?" He says, "You can go home, anyhow." We went in, me and him and Olsen, and had a glass of beer, and Mrs. Haakonsea was waiting outside of the house when we went in for the glass of beer. We went together home; it must be a good deal after 11 o'clock. Mr Haakonsea said, "You had better go up stairs and lie down." I went up stairs and undressed myself, and went to bed; I can't say what time it was, because there was no watch in the room; I guess it was about half-past 11 o'clock; that is all I know about it. I went to sleep, and, at 5 o'clock the next morning, a fellow in the house that used to call us to go to work, came up at 5 o'clock and called me. I was not going to work before half-past 6 that morning, and so I laid back again. Afterward, somebody was knocking at the door and wanted to come in; I says, "The key is in the door!" He couldn't get the door open, and I went out and opened the door, and there was a policeman and two women standing there. One of the women says, "There is the man that has been in my room last night." I said there must be a mistake; then the other woman, she came up to my face with a stick in her hand, and said, "You son of a bitch, if it had been me, you should not get out so light." I says, "I know nothing about it." Then I was arrested. When you went to bed were you intoxicated? I was a little but too much. Have you ever been arrested for anything in this or any other country, or ever charged with any crime? No. Did you ever walk in your sleep? I have been walking in my sleep several times, and people told me, here in this country, and Mr. Haakonsea said I walked asleep in the house where I lived.

CROSS EXAMINATION:

It would not be very hard for you to get out of your window and walk along to that fire escape, along the gutter; you are a sailor? I don't know; I don't think it would be very hard; I never tried it, and I cannot say. You could do it, if you wanted to, very easily? Yes. How old were you when you first were told that you walked in your sleep? I was about thirteen years old the first time my mother told me I used to walk in my sleep; they used to say I got up out of bed in the night-time and dressed myself and was walking around in the room, talking to myself. When was the next time? The next time was on board the ship; it was in the night-time; I went up and dressed myself, and took my oilskin and went out on deck, and a fellow came up to me and I talked to him; he says, "That fellow must be awake," and he came up and pushed me, and, just as he pushed me, I awoke and I fell right down on the deck; then I was twenty-two years of age. When was the next time? The next time I was down in Mr. Haakonsea's house; they told me I walked in my sleep. Do you know what you did? No; Mr. Haakonsea told me, the next day, what I did; that I walked into the water-closet. How many times had Mr. Haakonsea told you that you had been walking in your sleep? A couple of times he told me about it. Had you been drinking when you walked in your sleep on these occasions? I don't know; since I came in the house I have been drinking a little but not much. I understand that you do not deny that you were in the rooms of Mrs. McCaffrey, but you say you do not know whether you were or not; is that right? I don't know anything about it; I can't swear to being there. As soon as any one speaks to you, when you walk, in your sleep, you come out of the trance; is that right? Yes. Just as soon as they speak to you, you fall down; is not that so? Yes. Every time? I don't know; I have been walking so many times in my sleep I can't say. When you were walking in your sleep, did the mere speaking of words wake you up? No; they shook me. When you walked in your sleep in this Spring street house, you say you dressed yourself, walked down stairs, and walked into the water-closet? Yes. Did you wake up then? Of course I woke up. (By the Court:) If I understand you, you do not say that you were not in this room of the complainant, but you say you do not remember anything about it; is that right? I don't know anything about it.

KLAUS OLSEN, sworn and examined, testified as follows:

I am twenty-two years of age, and live in the same house with the defendant; I have lived there since about Christmas. Did you go out with the defendant on the night of the 9th of October? Yes; I was in the saloon and Mrs. Haakonsea came in and told Mr. Haakonsea that the defendant was sitting outside of the door, sleeping, in 347 Spring street, at about half-past 8 o'clock. So Mr. Haakonsea went out and told him to get up; he got up and we went on talking. Then Mr. Haakonsea said that he wanted him to come along and take a walk down to Battery Park. Mr. Haakonsea did not go along; the defendant and I went out for awhile together; we went up Spring street as far as Thompson and Bleecker, and stopped in a drinking saloon there, and stayed there, I think, until about half-past 10 o'clock. We went to go home, and came down Spring street, and, at the corner of Hudson, we met Mr. Haakonsea and his wife. He wanted us to take a walk with him, before he went home; so we did, and we went up Canal street, and went into a place on the corner of Varick and Canal and had a drink together, and Mrs. Haakonsea waited outside, and after that we went home; I suppose it was about half-past 11 when we got home. Both of us went to bed right away; I left him on the first floor; I didn't see him again until 5 o'clock the next morning, when I heard some noise outside of my door. I went out, and I heard them and Mrs. Haakonsea who was sleeping in the room next to Mrs. McCaffrey's. I went into my room again, to put on my clothes, and there I found the officer and the two ladies. I asked the defendant what was the matter; he started laughing, and he said, "I don't know; they say I went out of this window into that woman's room there?" I saw him go with the officer, and that is all I know. You have lived in the same house with him, and have seen him every day and night; what was his character, and how was he looked upon by the people around there? He has a good character, as far as I know of him, always. When you came home with him that night, was he intoxicated, about half-past 11 o'clock? Mes, he was. Was he very drunk? He couldn't walk straight; he reeled along. Do you know anything about his somnambulistic qualities? Yes; he came home one night from work, about 6 o'clock, about three months before this occurrence I think; I saw him coming out of the water-closet; he was wet, all his clothes, shirt and every bit.

CROSS EXAMINATION:

Did you go to see any girls that night? Yes, he did; I don't know whether he went into any room with the girl, but I stopped on the corner of Bleecker and Thompson until he came back. He went into the saloon corner of Bleecker and Thompson street; there were girls there, in the back room of the saloon; I didn't want to go. How long was he in there? About half an hour, I thin, in the back room of the saloon; he came out of the door from Thompson street, and I stopped on the corner of Bleecker and Thompson; after he came over to me, he went home. How much money did he have when he started out? I couldn't tell you. How much did he have when he came back? I don't know; he spent some with me, but whether he spent it all or not I do not know. When he got to the end, had he any money left? I think he had. When he came out of there, did he say where he had been, or did you have any conversation with him about it? No.

MARTIN HAAKONSEA, sworn and examined, testified:

I live at 347 Spring street, and keep a lodging house there. The defendant has lived in my house two or three months steady, and, before that, he lived there off and on, whenever he was in the city; he was going to sea. I saw him the night before he was arrested; he had been down to the dock to get his pay, and he came up between 8 and 9 o'clock after having got his pay. He paid me the little he owed me and then he went out again; and, when it was shutting up time, I shut up early that night, about 11 o'clock, and myself and wife went outside to have a little fresh air. Carl and Klaus were out, and it was no use to shut up before they came in. We went up Spring street, as far as the corner of Hudson, and then we met them; they were on the way home. We went down Hudson to Canal and Varick, and went into a saloon. I said to the boys, "We will have a beer before we go home." We three went inside and my wife stayed outside; we had a small glass of beer, and we went straight home, and we were home before 12 o'clock; we were home about half-past 11 o'clock. At that time was the defendant intoxicated? No, not that I could see; he only drank that glass of beer with me; I was not able to tell, by his actions, whether he was drunk or not. He is a man of good character, and as innocent as a child; I have had him inside of my bar, giving out drinks, and I have trusted him and would trust him with anything. Do you know anything about his having walked in his sleep? I do; I can't exactly tell how long ago it was when I first noticed it, but it was about three months since; he walked down into a closet in the back yard, and opened a big cover.

WILLIAM TORRESON, sworn and examined, testified:

I know the defendant, Hansen; we were children together and brought up together, and I have known him all my life-time, off and on. I have never known him to be arrested for anything. I went to the Captain and Mate of the vessel upon which he last sailed, and got a certificate of his character. (By consent of the District Attorney, the Counsel was permitted to read the certificate in evidence:)

"New York, October 18, 1893.

To Whom It May Concern: This is to certify that Carl Hansen has been a sailor on board the steamship EL Paso, for three months. I have always found him to be a trusty and faithful man. Respectfully,

J. A. Gardner, Master,

William R. Stinson, First Officer.)

Do you know anything about this defendant ever having walked in his sleep? Only what I was told.

CARL J. HANSEN, the defendant, being recalled by the District Attorney, testified:

How much money did you have when you got home that night? I had something around a dollar. When you went into the saloon that Olsen was telling us about, did you drink with those women? Yes; I stayed in there, drinking with the women and talking with them, about twenty minutes. Did you have them sit on your knees? No, I didn't get as far as that. Did you put your arm around them? I might have done that; I cannot remember.

The Jury rendered a verdict of GUILTY, with a recommendation to mercy.

Indictment filed OCTOBER 11TH, 1893.

APPEARANCES:

ASSISTANT DISTRICT ATTORNEY STEPHEN J. O'HARE,
For THE PEOPLE.

MESSRS. PURDY & EVANS,
For THE DEFENCE.

FRANK SULLIVAN, THE COMPLAINANT, being duly sworn, testified that he lived at No. 1 Second street, and had lived there about three years. He occupied two rooms at that address, on the third floor, front. His nephew, Eugene Sullivan, lived with him. On the night of the 3rd of October, 1893, he had in his room two suits of clothes, three overcoats, a diamond ring, and $85.00 in money, which was subsequently missed. The total value of the property was over $200.00. About a quarter past 8 on the night in question, the defendant entered his room, in company with the co-defendant. That was the first time he had ever seen the defendant in his life. The co-defendant introduced the defendant as "Schaefer." A friend of his, the complainant's, named Stack, who lived in Jersey City, was in the room at the time, and Eugene Sullivan was also there. He, the complainant, subsequently drank some beer which was taken in by the co-defendant. He noticed that the second can of beer tasted as if it had hartshorn in it, but the defendant said, "Oh, no; mix it up and drink it down." He tried again to drink it, and then he said that he did not want any more, and he did not remember anything more after that. Stack was not in the room when the second can of beer was taken in. He had been correcting his nephew's lessons for the following day, and the defendant went over and said, "Let's see what you are doing," and then he felt "something coming over him," and he went to the window and then he went into the bed-room; and he did not know anything more until twenty minutes past 3 o'clock the next morning. It was about ten minutes to 10 when he took the beer out of the second can. His nephew drank one glass of the second glass of beer. When he awoke, the following morning, he found that the defendant and the co-defendant were gone. He found his nephew in bed, with his clothes on. His nephew was eighteen years of age. His nephew was unconscious until about 4 o'clock in the following afternoon. He missed all the property which he had previously described. The $85.00 in money was in his pocket when he drank the beer. The defendant asked him three times for matches, to light his cigar. The defendant acted as if he were drunk. He had seen his clothes and his ring after the night in question, but he had not seen his money. On the night in question, the diamond ring was in a tin box in a closet in the room.

In cross-examination the complainant testified that he was born in London and came to this country when he was a little over four years of age. His step-father's name was Barrett, and he had sometimes gone under that name, to please his mother. He had been working for a man of the name of Kemp for fully ten years. He worked for Kemp under the name of Barrett, but Kemp knew what his right name was. His name was not "Camille." He was not a married man. He paid $10.00 a month for his two rooms. He had known the co-defendant, Hendricks, three or four years. Hendricks had visited him in his rooms. Eugene Sullivan was not in the room when the defendant entered. Eugene Sullivan had lived with him about five years. He, the complainant, at the defendant's request, sang a song. He did not

I like the defendant's looks, because he saw that the defendant was pretending to be drunk, and he was not drunk. He had not drunk anything on the day in question until the defendant and the co-defendant entered his room. He had seen the diamond ring in the tin box the day before the day in question. His clothes were off when he woke up. When he woke up, everything in the room "was upside down and tossed around."

ERNEST J. LEDERLE, being duly sworn, testified that he was an expert chemist, in the employ of the Board of Health of this city. He had been a chemist since 1886. (It is conceded by the defense that he is an expert.) He had made an analysis of the contents of two bottles which he had received from detective Hock. Each of the bottles contained chloral hydrate in considerable quantities.

WILLIAM F. STACK, being duly sworn, testified that he lived at 211 Hancock avenue, Jersey City. On the evening of the 3rd of October, he was in the apartments of the complainant. He saw the defendant there that night, about a quarter to 8 o'clock. The defendant was accompanied by the co-defendant. Eugene Sullivan was not in the room while he, the witness, was there. He drank a couple of glasses of the beer which was brought in by the co-defendant. He did not drink beer, because it did not agree with him. He left the complainant's rooms between half-past 9 and a quarter to 10. The defendant and the co-defendant were in the room when he left.

In cross-examination the witness testified that he was not known as "Polly" Stack, and he never heard anybody call him by that name. He worked at book binding. He had lived in Jersey City three years, and before that he had lived in New York city. He had known the complainant fourteen or fifteen years. He was not married. He, the witness, wanted to go home as soon as the men entered the complainant's rooms, but the complainant asked him to stay, because he did not like the looks of the defendant.

EUGENE F. SULLIVAN, being duly sworn, testified that he lived at No. 1 Second street, and had lived there about three years, with his uncle, the complainant. On the night in question he returned home about twenty minutes to 10 o'clock. He attended night school on that night. He worked for the Peerless Press, a printing concern, in 42nd street, and had worked there about five or six months. When he entered the room, the complainant, the defendant and the co-defendant were in there. There was a can of beer there then. His uncle, the complainant, got up and walked over to the window, and then went into the bed-room. The defendant and the co-defendant went into the bed-room with the complainant. The complainant then came out of the bed-room, and the co-defendant asked him if he wanted any more beer. The complainant said that he did not want any more, but the co-defendant went out for more beer. The complainant went into the bed-room, as he, the witness thought, to go to bed. The co-defendant brought in the last can of beer, and at that time the defendant was looking over his, the witness's, work which he had done at the night-school. He satdown in a chair and the co-defendant handed him a glass of beer. He drank the beer, and the book fell out of his hand and he did not know any more. His uncle, the complainant, was in his bed-room when he took the glass of beer.

In cross-examination the witness testified that he woke up the next afternoon, about 4 o'clock, and everything in the room was then turned upside down.

DAVID J. MALLON, being duly sworn, testified that he was connected with the 14th police precinct. The premises in question were in the 17th ward of the City of New York. In consequence of information which he received, he arrested the defendant, on the 4th of October, at 169 West 4th street, on the top floor, front. He arrested the defendant between the hours of half-past one and two o'clock, in the afternoon. When he entered the room, the defendant was lying on the bed. As soon as he entered the room, he went to the top drawer of a bureau which was in the room, and took therefrom People's Exhibit A, one of the phials which the witness Lederle testified contained chloral hydrate. He gave the phial to Detective Hock, who delivered it to Lederle. He then held his revolver to the defendant's head and awoke him, telling him that he had been instructed to take him to the station house, dead or alive, and he told the defendant to get up and dress himself. The defendant asked permission to put on a clean collar, which was accorded him. In going towards the bureau, the defendant made some motion which aroused his suspicion, and he pushed the defendant up against the wall, and took from the left-hand vest pocket of the defendant a small phial, People's Exhibit B. He then asked the defendant what he did with the ear-rings which he had taken from the woman the night before, and the defendant said he didn't know anything about any ear-rings, and he told the defendant that he would have to lock him up. On the way to the station house he told the defendant what he was accused of. He said to the defendant, "Do you know that one of the parties that you drugged last night is dying?" The defendant said, "Oh, I didn't give them anything that would kill them; I only gave them chloral of hydrate." He said, "Well, you gave them enough to kill a horse, and one of them has not come to yet, and the doctor is with him." The defendant said, "Well, I didn't give them enough to kill them." The complainant went to the station house, saw the defendant, and said, "This is the man that drugged me last night." The defendant said, "No, I didn't." He, the witness, said, "Well, the other man is liable to die; he hasn't come to as yet." The defendant said, "Well, I didn't give enough to kill any one; it was only chloral of hydrate." He asked the defendant where the coats were, and the defendant said, "You have got the information where they are, from the other man, and it serves me right to go up against Stiffs like that, and that is why I am thrown out." On the night of the 4th of October, he, the witness, found the coats and vests which the complainant had identified as his, in the Dakota Lodging House, corner of Canal street and the Bowery. He recovered the ring from Bella Trophagen, at some number in 74th street.

OFFICER JOHN HOCK, being duly sworn, testified that he was a police officer of the Municipal force, and in the same precinct as the preceding witness. He had a conversation, in the station house, with the defendant, on the afternoon of the 4th of October. He said to the defendant, "You took a great chance on that little boy; he hasn't come to yet, and he is liable to die." The defendant said, "Well, I guess I will have to stand for it all; it serves me right for going up against those muzzlers. He had received the bottles in evidence from Detective Mallon, and he had given them to the chemist Lederle. They were in the same condition when he gave them to Lederle as when he received them from Mallon."

HARRY J. WEBER, being duly sworn, testified that he lived at 73 Bowery, and was night-clerk of the hotel at that number. He had seen the defendant seven or eight times before. He saw him on the night of October 3rd, 1893, at the Dakota Hotel, between the hours of 12 and 1, and, later on, between 3 and 4. The defendant was accompanied by the co-defendant on both occasions. When the defendant and the co-defendant first went to the hotel they had some packages, which they left in his charge. The co-defendant told him to mark the package in the name of Brown, to be called for. He marked it as directed. The defendant and the co-defendant asked him out to have a drink, and he went out and had a drink with them. The co-defendant, in the presence of the defendant, asked him if he wanted to buy a ring. He told the co-defendant that he had a nice ring and he was short of money. The co-defendant offered to sell him the ring for $20.00. He finally purchased the ring from the co-defendant, in the presence of the defendant, for $13.00. He afterwards delivered package of clothing which had been left with him by the co-defendant to officers Mallon and Hock.

EDWARD J. DONLIN, being duly sworn, testified that he was a practising physician in this city. He had been a physician since 1876. He was also one of the Coroner's Physician's in this city. Chloral hydrate would produce coma, and, in some cases, death.

In cross-examination the witness testified that he didn't know anything about the contents of the bottles in evidence. He only spoke generally of the effects of chloral hydrate.

(No defence was offered.)
