Hon. Frederick Smyth. Recorder

Dear Sir:

The following is a report as to the character of Andrew Reilly charged with Larceny, as obtained from the people in the vicinity where he formerly lived.

Three years ago he came to 781 Atlantic Ave. from Connecticut opened a liquor store at the above number and remained there until a year ago last July - about two years ago his wife died at 441 Adelpbia Street Bklyn - after her death he became a perfect wreck, and a year ago last July left the above place for Philadelphia, and returned to the old vicinity in Brooklyn about two months ago. The people I inquired of said that since then he has been crazy from drink - he had been arrested for intoxication and locked up in the 10th Precinct Station house in Brooklyn nothing further than the above could be ascertained.

Very Respt.

3 Clifford Rossmere, being duly sworn, says: I am 27 years of age. On the 18th day of July, 1890, I pleaded guilty to the crime of ^{petit} grand larceny, 2nd Degree, and was sentenced by Judge Martine to one year's imprisonment in the Penitentiary and to the payment of a fine of One hundred and fifty dollars. My term of imprisonment expired on the 18th day of May, 1891; but, unless I pay the fine of one hundred and fifty dollars, I shall have to remain in the Penitentiary one day for each dollar, after my term of imprisonment expires, until said fine is worked out.

I am wholly unable to pay said fine, and will have to remain in prison one hundred and fifty days from the said 18th day of May, 1891, unless my said fine is remitted.

4 I am an Englishman by birth, and came to this country on the 9th day of ~~January~~ ^{November} 1889, to earn my living. I had very little money with me when I landed in this country, and I tried to get some work in New York City. In England, my profession was that of a journalist. Finding it impossible to secure work in New York, I went to the West; where, after visiting several cities, and trying to secure employment, I became discouraged, and returned to New York. Here misfortune still pursued me, and I lived a hand to mouth existence, until finally I was driven by poverty into committing the crime for which I have been sent to the Penitentiary.

5 I have no money myself, nor have I any friends or relatives, either in this country or in England, to whom I could apply for the requisite money to pay my said fine, with any hope of success, as my relatives are all poor and could ill afford to contribute any thing towards the payment of my fine.

If I regain my liberty, it is my firm intention to apply myself earnestly and unremittingly to gain an honest livelihood; and I have reason to hope that my efforts to find work will be rewarded with success.

I, therefore, humbly pray that the fine of one hundred and fifty dollars, that has been imposed upon me, may be remitted.

19th day of May, 1891.

Anna E. Tallman, being duly sworn, says:

I live at No. 24 East 47th Street, New York City, and am the ^{widow} wife of Herman C. Tallman, deceased.

I have known the defendant, Clifford Rossmere, ever since about the 1st day of December 1890, and have seen him quite frequently, as I am a weekly visitor to the Penitentiary.

7 It is my belief, from my knowledge of his character, that he will try hard to get work, if he regains his liberty, and will prove an honest, industrious and worthy citizen.

I have read his affidavit, hereto annexed, and from what I know of his circumstances, I fully believe his statements, therein contained, concerning his inability to pay his fine, to be true.
