Martin Regan.	:	New Trial.
-----X	:

The proof in this case shows that the alleged crime was committed on a vessel.

I. The jurisdiction of the court over a crime committed on board a vessel is under section 136 of the Code of Criminal Procedure and must in all respects be tested by that provision. It was the law before the enactment of that section that a crime so committed was not within the jurisdiction of any court at its port of destination.

Peo. vs. Hulse, 3 Hill, 309.

This was the common law. The section in question was framed directly with reference to that state of the law, and the law was thereby made to be the exact contrary, the language of the section being "the jurisdiction is in any county through which such river &c. passes, or in the county in which such voyage terminates, or would terminate, if completed." Now since this is so, it is very clear that the question of jurisdiction is elemental, and must of necessity be clearly proven in order to satisfy the statute, and any omission of such proof must be fatal to the prosecution. This is so on reason, but, also Larkin vs. the People, 61 Barb. 226, is a direct authority, the court in that case holding that

"In order to confer jurisdiction over an offense committed on board a boat &c., it must be proved that the crime was committed on board the boat, and on that trip she had passed through some part of the county where the indictment was found."

Now the proof in this case is, that the boat was an excursion boat. That it went to some Grove, up the river. That the fight in which complainant was hurt took place during the return. Where or when does not appear and is alluded to at all, it was in the most indefinite and uncertain language. Surely not enough to satisfy the statute. If it be necessary to prove the place of the crime in order to confer jurisdiction, then language leaving the matter to inference and conjecture cannot be sufficient. It must be clear, definite and positive. Mere reference by some familiar name by which a locality may be commonly known cannot be sufficient as, that the affray took place "on Broadway", or, "in Washington Park", or "off the Battery" or the like. This might be enough for some purposes, but not when the jurisdiction depends upon it. The court cannot rest its jurisdiction upon an inference as to what Broadway, or what Washington Park, or what Battery is meant.

11. Again, the section confers jurisdiction as to crimes committed upon "any river, lake, or canal in the state", and if this offense took place "off the Battery" it was on neither river, lake, or canal, and it must appear clearly that the offense did occur upon either a river, lake or canal in order to be within the statute.

Peo. vs. Hulse, 3 Hill, 309.
7 N. Y. 301.

It is further respectfully submitted that the evidence in this case is wholly insufficient to sustain the conviction. The complainant himself, being the only witness, and testifying that a day or two after the affray he was around asking who it was that did the cutting, and also on another occasion stating that a man by the name of Russell, did it.

It is, therefore, respectfully submitted that a new trial should be granted, upon the ground

- 1st. That the jurisdiction of the Court should have been clearly shown, and was not; and
- 2nd. That the verdict is against the evidence.

Our Own Association. ^{May 1888} The excursion started from the 19th Street dock. As the excursion returned to the city and just as it was turning the Battery, the defendant came up to the complainant with a knife in his hand.
A friend of the complainant's felt sick and went downstairs into a closet and came upstairs again and lay down on a bench. The defendant sat down by complainant's friend and put his hand in the friend's pocket. His friend said, "A dead man could feel you at that watch." Then Regan went away but came back a few moments afterwards and slipped his hand into the friend's pocket. His friend said, "Why don't you keep your hand off my pocket," and Regan said he had a good mind to hit him, and he did hit him. Then Regan went away and came back with eight or nine fellows and stabbed him, the complainant, eight or nine times. Under cross-examination he testified that the excursion started at about eleven o'clock in the forenoon. He had drunk after he got on the barge. He didn't drink more than two dollars' worth all day. The excursion went to Point View Grove. He was not drunk. The excursion returned at about nine o'clock in the evening, and it was about that time when the excursion was rounding the Battery. There was fighting nearly all day. A man was nearly killed at the grove, and they had to send him on a tug to the hospital at Yonkers. His friend lost his watch. The defendant assaulted him, the complainant, but he, the complainant, did not strike anybody. He was taken from the barge to Bellevue Hospital. He saw the knife in the defendant's hand.

It was a pen-knife. His friend's name was John Williams. He met the defendant at 17th Street and Avenue A some time after the affray and he asked the defendant who cut him, and the defendant said that he didn't know. He also said that if he got out of this trouble it would be a long time before he got into another one.

OFFICER CHARLES P. WADE testified that he was attached to the 18th Precinct. The complainant came to the station house all bandaged up on the 30th of May. He arrested the defendant and the complainant identified him.

For the Defense, Martin Regan testified that he was on the excursion and the complainant and his friend were in a fight on the top of the barge, and he, the defendant, got hit in the mouth. He went downstairs and when he came upstairs again the complainant charged him with stabbing him. He did not stab him and did not strike him. He did not attempt to steal John Williams's watch. Two nights afterwards the complainant came around to see him and said that if he didn't tell who stabbed him, the complainant, he would have him, the defendant, arrested, and that his brother was on the Police force and that his brother would kick the belly out of some one if he didn't make an arrest. It was a general fight on the barge, but he had nothing to do with it. He did not have a knife in his pocket that day, and was not in the habit of carrying a knife. Under cross-examination he testified that he was a flagger's helper.

JOHN BRADY testified that he was on the excursion. The first thing he knew was that he was dancing on the platform upstairs with a girl and the complainant appeared to be under the influence of liquor and bunked up against him, and he said to the complainant, "Excuse yourself," and the complainant said, "Excuse my self." Then he saw the complainant downstairs and the complainant said to him, "I think I can take a fall out of you." He, the witness, went away, because he did not wish to have any fight. Under cross-examination he said that he was not afraid of a small man like the complainant, but that he had a lady with him and did not want to get into any fight.

CATHARINE REGAN testified that she was the mother of the defendant and that she was in the habit of searching his pockets every morning and she never found a knife in his pocket. Her son lived at home with her, and was a good and industrious boy. He worked with his father, who was a flagger.

In rebuttal, Officer Wade, being recalled, testified that the defendant was arrested for an assault in 1883 by Officer Hartigan. The assault was committed in 13th Street and the defendant was arraigned before Police Justice Murray.
