-----X
People vs.
Mary Noonan.
Indictment filed, Feb 8th 1889.
Indicted for Burglary in the first degree.
-----X

A P P E A R A N C E S:

Assistant District Attorney Davis, for the People
Jacob Berlinger, for the Defense.

OFFICER HERMAN C. STURKE, the complainant, testified that he lived at 162 Madison Street, and was a member of the Municipal Police force of the City of New York. The premises in question were in the Seventh Ward. He, the complainant, lived on the third floor back. He had three rooms there. On the morning of the 26th of January, 1889, he missed some property--some clothing and a watch. The clothing was women's clothing and a man's clothing. His missed three pairs of trousers, worth four dollars a pair, and three dresses, one of which was silk. He could not undertake to value them in the absence of his wife, but they were worth, at least, five dollars. He missed, also, a silver watch, valued at eighteen dollars, and also a set of gold buttons worth fully five dollars. He also missed a pocket-book containing seven dollars and twenty-seven cents. All of the property was in the sitting room of his rooms. He missed it when he returned from the station house, about half past six o'clock on the morning in question. He had seen the property on the preceding day at one o'clock. He found a window opening on the yard of the house open. The window opened upon the fire-escape. Any one could step easily through the window from the fire-escape into the room. There was no evidence of the window having been forced, because it could be readily lifted. His family were in the house on the preceding night.

0590

Under cross-examination, he testified that he did not know the defendant before her arrest, and did not know that she lived in the next house to him.

3

OFFICER JOHN P. KELLY testified that he belonged to the Seventh Precinct, and he arrested the defendant on the morning of January 27th in her home at 169 Madison Street. The complainant's house was about four doors away from the defendant's house. He arrested her at nine o'clock in the morning, upon the charge of receiving the watch and a pair of sleeve-buttons and a pocket-book from a prisoner that he arrested the night before. She at first denied that she had received these things, but afterwards admitted receiving the watch, sleeve-buttons and pocket-book. When he first entered he told her the charge against her and she said that she did not have the articles and did not know anything about them. Then he, the witness, told her that she must know something about them, because Dempsey had told him, the witness, that he had passed the stuff to her, and then the defendant said that she had the articles. Then the defendant took him down to a house in Dover Street, near Madison, where she said she had taken the property. At the house he, the witness, saw an old woman who occupied the room that they went to. The old woman went to a wardrobe and took out a parcel and in the parcel were the articles in question. The watch and sleeve-buttons were in the parcel. When he received the parcel from the old woman the defendant said nothing. He took her to the station house, and he had a further conversation with her. She said that Dempsey told her the afternoon before that they were going to bring some stuff into her house during the evening. She said that she knew that they were coming, but if she had known that she was going to get into any trouble she would not have had anything to do with them. He, the witness, arrested Dempsey and Corkey at about half past eight o'clock in the evening, and he did not arrest the defendant until about half past eight or nine o'clock on the following morning. Dempsey and Corkey were in the yard of the defendant at 169 Madison Street when he arrested them. They had then in their possession three ladies' dresses, two or three pairs of trousers and a boy's ulster, and several other smaller articles of clothing. These articles were subsequently identified by the complainant.

For the Defense, MARY NOONAN, the defendant, testified that her right name was Moran and that she lived at 169 Madison Street. She had never been in trouble before and had never been convicted of any crime. She had known Dempsey about a week and had known Corkey about the same time. She was introduced to them by a young lady that she worked with in Roosevelt Street in a paper-box factory. She received the articles that were delivered to the officer by the old woman from Dempsey and Corkey between eight and nine o'clock on the evening that they were stolen. She could not remember which one of the men handed the articles to her. It was in the hall way of the house where she lived. They did not say anything to her, but handed the articles to her, and she took them down to the old woman's house in Dover Street. She did not know that the articles were stolen. The five-dollar bill that was found with the watch and sleeve-buttons was the identical bill that one of the defendants gave her.

Under cross-examination, she testified that she saw Dempsey and Corkey come out of the back yard of the house just before they gave her the articles. Her friend, who introduced her to Dempsey and Corkey, boarded with the old woman in Dover Street. She, the defendant, did not know the old woman's name. She asked the old woman to take care of the package for her and she would call for it in the morning. She did not tell the old woman what was in the package. She rather suspected that the articles were stolen that Dempsey and Corkey gave her. She did not tell the officer who arrested her that Dempsey had told her the afternoon before that he intended to bring some stuff into the house.

In Rebuttal, the complainant being recalled, identified his watch by the monogram upon it, and he also identified his sleeve buttons. His family went to bed at a quarter to six on the evening before he discovered the burglary.
