The scuffle lasted some time; he said, "Damn you, I'll kill you yet;" he struck me once or twice about the head and shoulder and once on the jaw. I was trying to keep him as near the wall as possible because he would not have the free use of his arms then. He had me bent down and when he said, "I'll kill you yet," I put my hand in my hip pocket and got the knife out. I thought he was raising his right hand to strike me and I struck him in the leg. I thought he was going to kick me in the stomach and I struck him in the leg where I thought it would not injure him seriously. I thought my life was in danger. He kept his hand in my coat collar until I stabbed him. I pulled loose and went up stairs.

The officer arrested me on Charlton about halfway between Hudson and Varick sts. I was then on my way to the station house. I never cut at a woman with a knife. He had me bending down and was over me when I used the knife. Cross examined. I came here from Philadelphia in 1877. I was born in Huntsville, Ala. I have lived in New York since 1877. I had some words with a woman pavement and I was afraid they were going to attack me. I turned around and got on the door step. I thought they had passed on and I would go to my dinner. As I turned around they came back, the deceased, in front. He got up to me and says, "we annoy you, do we, damn you?" and punched me in the stomach. I had a clay pipe in my mouth smoking it. I don't know how I lost it. When I got to the station house they took the stem out of my mouth. When he said, "we annoy you," and punched me in the stomach. I pushed him away and said, "Go away - don't raise a disturbance at the door." Then I turned and went in the hallway of the house I live in. He ran in after me and struck at me. When I turned round I was in a kind of stooping position. Then the punch in the stomach pained me a little. As I got in he made a rush at me and struck at my head and I dodged down. I went face foremost and was retreating as he followed me; he caught me with his left hand. I tried to wriggle loose and could not do it. I put up my hand to push him and he struck me Reichhardt and Ammerman stood by the rail to my left and the deceased did not appear to see me. Reichhardt said, "Let the man pass." The deceased stepped out to my left and I started out. He says, "You object to his standing here, do you?" I told him I did not want to talk about it as I did not want any trouble or quarrel. I went out on the pavement eight or ten feet from the door. The Sergeant asked him, did he do it? He said, I suppose there is no use of my denying it now, I stabbed him. This is the knife he took from his pocket. The stain that is on it now was on then. The prisoner must have went out through the rear hallway. When I saw him he was going towards Varick st. The District Attorney then read the deposition of Dr. Wm J. Jenkins, who made the post mortem. Wm J. Jenkins, M.D. being sworn. says: Saturday morning January 19, 1884 at 11.30 a.m. I made an autopsy at 196 Spring st. on the body of George W. James Mairs sworn. I am an officer of the eighth precinct and were so in January. I remember the 18th of that month about noon I was in Hudson St. A boy told me somebody had been cut. I went up to the corner drug store. I went inside and found the deceased sitting in a chair with blood all around the floor. I went around to 348 to see if I could get the prisoner. Some one in the crowd that had collected there told me that he could get through - into Charlton St. I went around the corner to Charlton St. Some one said, "There he goes up the street. I ran after him and caught him halfway up the block on Charlton between Varick and Hudson Sts. I said to the prisoner, "What have you been doing?" and he turned around and said, "I was going to the station house." I took him back to the drug store and the deceased was dead. I took him to the station house. While he was in there nothing was said. I put the prisoner before the desk and I told the Sergeant what had happened; he asked him his pedigree and he gave it. He asked him did he do it? He put his hand in his pocket and pulled out a knife and put it on the desk.

together in the hallway, but I did not see them clinched. I do not recollect that I said before the Coroner that I saw them clinched in the hallway (Paper shown) that is my handwriting and signature. Counsel reads: "I saw the deceased and the prisoner clinched in the hallway." I do not recollect saying this, but I suppose I did. I did not say that "They were beating and pounding." They kind of held each other tight - they were like in a grip. I did not take much notice whether they were wrestling. Ammerman pulled himself away and that is the time I suppose he got stabbed. I did not see him stabbed. I did not see Ammerman strike the prisoner three or four blows. I saw no blows exchanged. I did not see the prisoner strike the deceased, but I saw them locked and gripped together and in a struggle. Hardie lives at 348 Hudson Street and that hallway was the entrance to Hardie's house; he went into that hallway after he shoved the deceased Ammerman. I said that before the Coroner and repeat it now. And the deceased Ammerman followed him in? Followed him in the hallway.

followed him; they went in about the middle of the hallway. While Ammerman had been the hallway a little while he came out with his hand on his thigh saying, "I am stabbed." I did not see any scuffle between them. Hardie went up stairs. We took Ammerman in the drug store as soon as we could. I saw blood flowing from the wound the drug store to which Reidhardt and I took him is on the corner of Charlton and Hudson sts.; Ammerman walked there; we helped him, one on each arm. Reidhardt stayed in the drug store with him while I went across the way for a doctor. There was no doctor in at the time. I do not suppose I had been gone over five minutes; when I got back the deceased was dead. Hardie was not brought in when I was there. How long did you say it was that they were in the hallway before Ammerman came out? I should judge about half a minute or so. Reidhardt and I were just outside the door; the hall door was open all the time. I was too far away to hear the conversation. Cross Examined I saw the deceased and the prisoner returned to the sidewalk saying, "I am stabbed". The deceased was over Hardie striking him on the head. I did not see the deceased kick him in the stomach. I cannot say whether he did or not. The prisoner struck at Ammerman two or three times and Ammerman struck at Hardie about the same number. They were not clinched together, but they were fighting with their fists. I saw Ammerman strike Hardie on the head with his fist once and he also struck him on the back and shoulder. I cannot exactly say what part of the body the blows were struck. Richard H. Vermilyea sworn. I live at 350 East Tenth St. In January, I lived at 591 Boone St. I remember the 18th of January. I was standing about noon in front of 348 Hudson St. with Charles Reichardt and Ammerman the deceased. I saw the prisoner coming from the hallway of 348 Hudson St. He came about as far as the sidewalk, turned back again and reentered and came to the door sill and stood there. While standing there the deceased Ammerman went up and offered him his hand. I did not hear anything said; they were not talking. Hardie shoved Ammerman away and he (Hardie) went in the hallway. Ammerman half a minute to my knowledge. I saw blood on his thigh; it was spurting out. I walked him to the drug store on the corner of Front and Hudson St. Mr. Vermilye and I sat him upon a chair. I told Vermilye to go for a doctor; he returned and said he could not find any. I returned to the railway to see that Hardie did not get out. I saw the prisoner at the drug store with the officer. When the officer asked if the prisoner was the man who did the stabbing and some other said, yes. Hardie did not say anything. Believing by this time the man was dead, I was to my knowledge five minutes after the stabbing. (Now examined) I said before the coroner that when Hardie pushed the deceased upon his offering his hand that they were mauling at each other.

There was talk between them that I did not understand. I said before the coroner that what they were pulling in the hallway that Hardie was heading down and I remember was the under man in the fight. His contusion 15 or 20 seconds. I said before the coroner that two or three minutes elapsed from the time the deceased followed the prisoner into the hallway until the deceased
