It was on the 30th of June, he came with one of the books in question, and said that he wanted to sell them. He said that he had six volumes which he wanted to sell. He asked what he thought they would bring. ^{witness,} He told the defendant he thought they would bring two dollars a volume as it was

He left the book and said he would ^{bring} read the other five volumes on the following day, which he did. The other five volumes came by a boy; they were sold on the following Monday, June 7th, and were bought by Mr. John R. Foley. On the 8th day of June he came and asked for an account. He, the witness, told the defendant to call in on the 9th, and on that day he was arrested.

-----000-----

Under cross examination the witness testified that the books had been returned to Mr. Comstock.

-----000-----

Officer JAMES OATES, of the first Precinct, being duly sworn, testified that he arrested the defendant on the 9th of June, at number 57 Cedar Street. He asked the defendant where he got the books, and he said he got them from James Morris, who printed the Real Estate Age; but he, the witness, could find no such person. He asked the defendant where Morris lived and he said he did not know.

The defendant said that Morris gave him the books for money that he owed. He said that Morris frequented the Real Estate Exchange; that he, the witness, could never

-----000-----

For the defence, CHARLES DAVENPORT, the defendant, being duly sworn, testified that he lived at 124 Orchard Street. His business was to buy goods at auction rooms, and sold them over again. He met James Morris

He met James Morris in the fall of 1879, when he, the defendant, was a partner in a printing business at 152 Grand Street.

Morris was a classmate of his at the Cooper Institute in Professor Zachow's Class of Elocution. Morris was living then in Eighth Street. He was then in the employ of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

In January 1885, he returned from the West and on the 4th of July of that year he met Morris at Coney Island. ~~He~~ said he was a little short of money. He, the defendant, lent him ten dollars; Early in January, in the evening, an express man came and delivered a package containing the books. He said he did not know who they came from. He, said there was no money due, and turned around and walked out. He, the witness, opened the package and found a note from James Morris which he had lost. He said he was sorry to disappoint him, the defendant, in the amount of the loan, but that he had sent the books and hoped that they would pay the amount of the loan.

As complainant in the above case, I beg to recommend the defendant to such leniency and clemency as the Court and District Attorney may see fit to show; but I expressly assert that my reasons for so doing are not controlled by any advantage to myself. I never desired to make a complaint against Sturtevant - I think he was careless but not dishonest, and I made a complaint against Davenport only, but the next day Officer Bates arrested Sturtevant, whose name as it will be perceived was added to the complaint. His employers assure me of his perfect honesty, and my own information is to the effect that he is an honest boy. I respectfully ask the mistake be rectified and Sturtevant discharged.

Dear Sir.

The wife of Jas. Donohue who will appear before you for sentence next Monday, has asked me to write you concerning him. She will soon become a mother - I may add for the first time, and she seems to think if I state this to you - you will consider it in passing sentence.

I feel assured that this fact has not escaped you and that my letter will be an unnecessary intrusion, but as her physician and friend I cannot deny her.

The anxieties springing from her husband's misfortune, added to those incident to her condition have weakened her very much.

Through it all she has had the hope of an acquittal, and now should be met with no leniency at your hands. I honestly fear the consequence both for her and her unborn child. I do not exaggerate when I say that her life and that of her child may have to pay the penalty of her husband's wrong doing. Her counsel will undoubtedly acquaint you with her circumstances.

I have only presumed to state her physical condition at present and the possibilities in her case.

As I have said I know all these things will be considered by you independent
